An Italian Won
52,000,000 New Tires
England's Richest Man
Whale Meat Might Do

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Mr. Nuvolari, of Italy, winning the automobile race on a track foolishly constructed in imitation of a pretzel, reminds us that some Europeans do some things better than Americans do them.

Energy and courage in that race were not wasted; American automobile makers learned some things that they will be glad to know.

Had our American war ace, Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, who used to race automobiles before he went up in the air to shoot enemy planes, been in last Monday's race, the result would have been an American victory.

More important than any race are these facts: This country spent in the past year as much for automobiles as it did for food; a good division, for motion, fresh air, sunshine, family happiness, are at least as important as food.

P. W. Litchfield, who knows about tires, says Americans this year will buy 52,000,000 tires, which means more than one hundred trillion miles of automobiling, allowing only 10,000 miles to a tire on the average; and 25,000 miles would be nearer the mark.

There is a good deal of fresh air and happiness in one hundred trillion miles of automobiling, with an average of four or five passengers to each set of tires.

"The richest man that England ever had," is dead. John Ellerman was his name, and he startles all England, leaving a fortune of TWO HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS. His son, John Ellerman, will get half, the British government will take the other half for taxes.

Americans are impressed by the pitifully small size of England's "greatest fortune." Here we have one elderly gentleman who has given away more than twice as much as Mr. Ellerman leaves, and with his son to help him, he continues giving.

The son of England's richest man has for hobby the hedgehog, a small English imitation porcupine. He keeps the hedgehogs as pets. Mr. Rockefeller hasn't got a hedgehog, but he has the Rockefeller Institute for fighting disease, a "hobby" more satisfactory than hedgehogs.

Chicago's meat packers predict higher meat prices, low supplies from farms. In Germany the meat problem causes the government to experiment with whale meat. Whale steaks are said to be at least "acceptable." Various food problems might be solved if men would encourage instead of destroying whales, sea cows and other ocean-going mammals.

Artificial selection, careful breeding of sea mammals might mean food supplies unlimited. The German government plans whaling expeditions for meat, as well as fat.

Spain announces the end of a dramatic war story.

A dancing adventuress, Mata Hari, who said she was Javanese, appeared in Paris in a "sacred dance," dressed only in strings of pearls, dropping the strings one at a time until no pearls were left, and later became a spy in the big war. A Frenchman, Pierre De Morissac, fell in love with her, and, after a French firing squad disposed of Mata Hari, De Morissac, disgusted with life, entered a Spanish monastery. He has now been picked up, his monk's costume riddled with bullets after defending his monastery with a machine-gun. That ends the Mata Hari romance.

Shops in Palestine are again open and crowded, in a business boom after 25 weeks of strikes, rioting and killing. This emphasizes the importance of action. While the English talked, Arabs continued shooting Jewish settlers on their farms. When England sent enough soldiers and ammunition and began shooting, the trouble came to an end. There is no substitute for action.

Secretary of State Hull says that, in all history, "force has never conquered ideas," which is true in the long run, since force dies, and ideas last forever, if they are sound. But, force has certainly checked ideas, as when the Caliph destroyed the great library because, "if it is all in the Koran, the library is not necessary, and if it is not in the Koran it is pernicious." Also, when one branch of the Christian church burned Giordano Bruno alive, and another branch, managed by Calvin, burned Dr. Servetus

HUNT MISSING QUINCY MAN IN SACK QUIZ

State detectives learned today that a Quincy man friendly to Grayce Asquith has been missing from his home since September 18, the day before the Weymouth "Merry Widow" is believed to have been slain and dismembered in her Whitman pond bungalow.

The discovery further confused the groping police efforts resulting from the finding of a woman's severed limbs in the harbor, the disappearance of Mrs. Asquith, the evidence of violence in her home and the unexplained vanishing of John A. Lyons, Back Bay war veteran, named as her "last guest."

Search for the missing Quincy man was immediately begun.

He was, police learned, a close friend of a man who has figured in the investigation and, like the latter, was a frequent visitor at the Weymouth house where Mrs. Asquith was last seen alive on September 19. He is a powerful man, weighing 200 pounds or more.

While detectives pressed the search for this new figure and for the missing Lyons — and for the

RUSS DEMAND BLOCKADE ON PORTUGAL

By the Associated Press

Moscow, Oct. 14—Soviet Russia has demanded establishment of a virtual blockade of Portugal by the British and French navies to halt supplies of arms for Spanish insurgents, officials disclosed tonight.

The demand was made by Russian diplomatic officials to Lord Plymouth, chairman of the international non-intervention committee, in London today.

"Immediate establishment of "control" over Portuguese ports, it stated, is the only way to end the supply of arms to the Fascist armies in Spain.

Thief Flees With $600 In Gems

An armed sneak thief looted a Beacon Hill apartment of $600 worth of jewelry today and threatened to kill two women who returned to the apartment as he was about to leave.

The break occurred in the apartment of Mrs. Annie Dwyer, 59, of Mt. Vernon street. Mrs. Dwyer and her daughter, Mrs. Mona Tracy of Oakland, Me., were threatened by the thief.

The two women, who had been shopping, were taking off their coats when they heard a man say:

"Stand where you are, or I'll shoot you both."

Seeing nobody they thought the voice came through an open window.

As they went to the window to look out, the intruder came out of the bathroom where he had been hiding, and pointed a revolver at them.

He was stylishly dressed, wearing a light brown soft hat and camel's hair topcoat.

At his command they flung up their hands and stood still while he passed between them and ran down the rear stairs.

WARNS MORE OF NEW DEAL 'RUINOUS'

Text of Gov. Landon's Detroit speech on page 4.

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON

International News Service Staff Correspondent

Detroit, Mich., Oct. 14 — Governor Alfred M. Landon, a modestly successful business man from a "typical prairie state," was given a sweeping endorsement for the presidency today by Henry Ford, one of the world's most successful business men.

Ford praised Landon as a man fully qualified for the presidency. He expressed a hope that Landon would be elected, and a belief in his ability to solve the nation's problems.

The world's greatest automobile manufacturer also denounced the Roosevelt "social security" program as a "cruel joke" to the millions of workers in American industry. He described it as a law fixing "social security at the level of about fifty cents a day 20 years from now.

He pleaded with workers to inquire into the law, under which the federal government begins collecting payroll taxes from both employers and employes' pay envelopes next January.

Ford issued a prepared statement endorsing Landon before the Republican nominee left here to continue his campaign tour of the industrial area of Michigan. Landon headed northward for visits to Flint, Lansing, Jackson, Battle Creek, Kalamazoo and Grand Rapids. He will be in the latter city tomorrow morning, when President Roosevelt visits it.

Landon departed with Republican leaders confidently predicting he would carry Michigan, following his dramatic challenge to President Roosevelt to tell the American people before election day whether he proposes to revive the NRA and AAA or to suggest amendments to the Constitution.

He charged the President's silence on his future plans was an "attempt to dodge the fundamental issue of this campaign." Landon also pledged himself to ask Congress to repeal every law conferring "autocratic powers" on the President.

The Ford indorsement of Landon was complete. The original copy was written in longhand by the auto manufacturer, following Landon's visit to his home yesterday afternoon.

The couple spent several hours together, later visiting the Greenfield village where Ford is recreating the America of yesterday. There they heard a school of children recite psalms and sing old-fashioned hymns. Landon was touched by the recital.

FORD ANALYZES LANDON

It was at this conference that Ford studied Landon. Here are his conclusions:

"This was my first opportunity to meet the man who has brought this campaign back to American issues. I gained three very distinct impressions of him: First, he is exceptionally well informed and has had experience along many lines; second, he is able to speak his mind in the frankest possible way—he is open and honest in his opinions; third, he knows where he stands because he has thought things through.

"Governor Landon's mind has not been warped. My judgment would be that he would be a hard man to turn from the American way of doing things. The trouble with the presidency is that a man may say and intend one thing, but pressure may compel him to do something different. Governor Landon impressed me as a man who would resist pressure. He knows the difficulty of the job before him, but he believes he can make adjustments that will help everything move along more smoothly. I think he can.

HE KNOWS BUSINESS

"He is a business man who knows how to make both ends meet, and he is a sympathetic, thoughtful person. He ate out of a dinner bucket for years and he still thinks along with the men who carry dinner buckets. It is not a pose with him—it is his nature. After having this long talk with him I admire and believe in him. I hope he is elected."

Declaring he was not criticizing the New Deal—"I only say we have had enough of it, we have had about all the country can stand."—he thanked it for "keeping us on the alert for our country."

He said manufacturers had been "deluded" by New Deal promises but "of course they awoke out of that dream, because the promises that were made to them could not be kept."

Then, denouncing the New Deal's "Social Security" program Ford said:

"What disturbs me is that the New Deal is now making to the workmen the same impossible promises that it made to the business man. I doubt if American mechanics are going to regard $15 a month 25 years from now as very much 'social security.'

LOWEST WAGES

"New Deal wages were always the lowest possible because they were set at depression levels, and now 'social security' is defined at the level of about 50 cents a day 20 years from now. Everybody must know that it doesn't mean anything.

"Next January we must begin taking money out of our men's pay envelopes and turn it over to the government. The wage does not belong to the man who earns it so far as this tax on it is concerned; he is not permitted to handle it; his emploer must deduct the tax from the pay envelope. The majority of the Ford employes will have to endure that for the next twenty or twenty-five years—unless the act is thrown out or falls of its own weight.

"Making the social system is one thing—it is a job for the greatest statesmen the nation can produce—but pretending to create security for a selected class in an insecure system, is a cruel joke—especially when you take their money for it.

FORD ASKS NOTHING

"I hope the American workman will inquire into this for himself. He knows as well as anyone that there is no 'something for nothing' even in politics."

In conclusion, Ford asserted the United States could not be deflected from its course. For himself and his associates, he asked nothing—"We are going along at our own job, stronger than ever."

"We give competition and we ask for competition," he declared. "If we must compete also with a false political system, very well. We seek ability to pay higher wages, to give buyers more value, to find methods that are less expensive, to keep prices and profits low in order that value and wages and service may be high. That's the American system; that's brought us where we are. And nothing better has turned up to take its place."

alive, ideas were conquered, temporarily.

Speakers at the dairy show in Atlantic City emphasize the importance of "yellower milk," that being the fashionable color, also the fact that the dairy industry pays $3,500,000 a day in cash to farmers. If it would pay double that amount, the farmers would get for their milk a price making it worth while to milk cows, wean calves and haul milk. Five cents a quart would not be too much.

ROOSEVELT PLEDGES PROMOTION OF PEACE

By GEORGE R. HOLMES,

International News Service Staff Correspondent.

St. Louis, Oct. 14 (INS)—President Roosevelt paused here today in his political campaigning to dedicate a memorial to the soldier dead of the World War and, in doing so, dedicated his own administration to the promotion of peace.

"We best honor the memory of those dead by striving for peace," he said before a great audience grouped about the soldiers' memorial here.

"In what we have done during the last three years to promote national recovery at home, to extend the hand of the good neighbor to the nations of the world, to break down the barriers to commerce which divide nation from nation, we are promoting the cause of peace throughout the world."

SERVE HOME FRONT

At the same time, Mr. Roosevelt called for service on the home front.

"Inequalities in our social order call for correction," he declared.

"A true patriotism urges us to build an even more substantial America where the good things of life may be shared by more of us—where the so-called injustices will not be encouraged to flourish."

The new memorial stands on the site of the begining of the old Oregon Trail, and the President called attention to the fact as being significant. He praised the courage of those earlier pioneers who dared to face the unknown dangers of an unknown land "with stout heart and determined mind."

"We seek to follow their example along another trail," he said. "They turned not back. Let us not turn back in what we seek in these years—a sounder and more permanent well-being in America.

"We honor them and we will carry on."

The dedication of the memorial occupied most of Mr. Roosevelt's hour and a half visit to St. Louis.

their affiliation can be judged by their addresses, it was stated.

New registrations, it was explained, are due primarily to active work by party organizations in the various wards and precincts, and the addresses can be compared with the localities where Republican or Democratic organizations are most active.

Longest lines today at the election department offices were at the windows of wards 4 and 5, Back Bay, Republican districts, and ward 21, Allston, which until the last primaries was considered overwhelmingly Republican.

G. O. P. leaders said they believed at least half of the registrants today from ward 21 were Republicans because energetic efforts have been made to overcome the Democratic gain shown in the primaries which was ascribed to extraordinary efforts by that party.

Seven thousand new names are expected to be added to the lists today, before closing time at 10 p. m. These will be added to the total of 343,934, which was reached last night.

This will set an all-time record for Boston. The previous record was 319,715, in 1934.

A new record for the State will also be set this year, in the opinion of State officials.

A total of 46,680 new voters was added to the list in Boston before the September primaries, and 24,202 since that time.

What Landon Stands For:
Trade Revival

GOVERNOR LANDON is pledged to the PROTECTION of American trade in AMERICAN MARKETS.

HE believes TIMES will be good in this country when BUSINESS is good.

HE knows the HAPPINESS of the people depends on the EMPLOYMENT of workers in private industry AT GOOD WAGES.

AND he knows that business must produce and SELL its goods PROFITABLY to be ABLE to give jobs and pay wages.

HE subscribes to the AMERICAN theory of prosperity, which means that money SPENT at home STAYS at home.

Governor Landon believes government policy that floods American markets with FOREIGN goods keeps American workers IN THE BREAD LINE.

HE denounces trade agreements that provide outlets for ALIEN goods in AMERICAN markets, while our own farms and factories are IDLE and our workers subjected to the HUMILIATION OF RELIEF.

HE demands that the AMERICAN standard of living be PROTECTED against the COMPETITION of coolie labor and cheap wares of peasant-ridden foreign countries.

INDUSTRY operating PROFITABLY, agriculture producing the nation's food on a BASIS OF EQUALITY with industry, and labor sharing to the full the PROSPERITY that must follow—

THIS IS GOVERNOR LANDON'S GOAL FOR AMERICA.

Fascist violation of the "hands off Spain" accord.

Ivan M. Maicky, the ambassador, who returned from Moscow only last night, lost no time in personally assuming charge of Russia's case against Italy, German and Portugal, which it has accused of sending military aid to Spain's insurgents.

While the British cabinet assembled across the street, he descended on the foreign office, and called on Lord Plymouth, British chairman of the non-intervention group.

Thus he lent personal emphasis to a new and formal Russian demand for action to isolate the Spanish war.

The ambassador was accompanied by M. Kagan, Soviet member of the non-intervention committee. They reached the foreign office shortly after the second Russian note within a week had been delivered to Lord Plymouth.

It was understood Ambassador Maisky flatly informed Lord Plymouth that Russia considered a week ample time for the Fascist states to reply to the Soviet charges, detailed at last Friday's committee session.

Informed sources, which declared details of the message were not disclosed, asserted the note ended on the ominous note of "— or else."

(Russia previously threatened to withdraw from the neutrality agreement unless measures were taken to assure non-intervention by European nations in the Spanish conflict. The Soviet hinted then such withdrawal might result in military aid from Moscow to the Socialist Madrid government.)

The committee suspended its sessions last Friday to allow Germany, Italy and Portugal time to answer Russian charges the Fascist nations were rending aid to Spanish insurgents against the Madrid government.

The Campaign Swing

G. O. P. and Dems In Stiff Battle

Curley Says Man Must Lick Him

By WILLIAM C. CONWAY

Governor James M. Curley has resorted to his "back-against-the-wall" style of campaigning and is storming his opponents' citadels with his heaviest oratorical artillery.

"They've been licking me for 37 years, but they haven't done it yet. When Curley is licked, it will be a man who will lick him and not a boy."

Such is the challenge which Governor Curley is hurling as he swings back into his old style of campaigning, as he did last night when he addressed large rallies in Webster, Southbridge and Worcester.

He was at his best as he paced back and forth on the platform in Mechanics Hall, Worcester, swinging his arms and smashing at the Republican party, the National Union for Social Justice and his opponents for election to the U. S. Senate.

SHOUTS DEFIANCE

"I was told that unless I renounced Roosevelt with all his works I would be destroyed politically," he shouted. "They've been destroying me for 37 years, and they haven't done it yet.

"I was told that if I would be a traitor to Roosevelt, I could have the endorsement of the Social Justice group," he declared.

A woman in the audience yelled:

"You don't need it."

"You bet I don't," Curley called back.

Governor Curley made a bid for the vote of the racial groups in Worcester when he reminded his audience of the appointments from members of the "newer races" he has made during his administration.

James Roosevelt told the Worcester audience that his father would balance the budget in two years "in the way it should be balanced, by restoring prosperity."

HURLEY RETORTS

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, Democratic nominee for Governor, told the audience he would "ignore the Haigis campaign of mud-slinging" and devote the remainder of the campaign to a discussion of his opponent's record on labor and social security legislation.

"My opponent has stooped so low that I am not going to pay attention to his campaign of mud-slinging," the Democratic gubernatorial nominee said. "I will discuss his record as a state legislator and my platform."

Haigis Defends Labor Stand

By L. CONANT, JR.

Northampton, Oct. 14—In this Connecticut valley city, made historic by Calvin Coolidge, members of the state Republican ticket reiterated their pledge to restore American government to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts before a wildly enthusiastic audience.

But overshadowing even this flying start of the "victory swing" of the western part of the state was the appeal of James C. Oliver, Townsendite congressman-elect from Maine, for members of that organization to vote the Republican ticket.

"A vote for an independent candidate," he emphasized, "is a vote for the New Deal.

"I appeal to every Townsendite not to waste his vote on an independent candidate who has no chance of election.

"Vote for your Republican Congressman and the Republican candidate for senator and governor."

APPLAUD HAIGIS

Before huge audiences here in Easthampton and his home town of Greenfield, John W. Haigis, Republican gubernatorial nominee, drew great waves of applause when he branded as "absolutely false" the rumor that he was against the 48-hour week for employes of state institutions.

"The tax-payers of Massachusetts used to get more for their dollar than in any other state of the Union. Today, just the reverse is true.

"I say that if I am elected all state contracts shall be restored to the open system of competitive bidding.

"I say that we shall reaffirm our faith in the independence and integrity of the judiciary."

LODGE TALKS

Herny Cabot Lodge, Jr., fighting leader of his party for the office of U. S. senator, charged that under the present administration the deep seated American desire of leisure for the aged and opportunity for the young was more remote than ever.

"The day of the 'good job,'" he said, "has not yet arrived in this state.

"I repeat here my belief in an old age pension system as generous as the resources of the country will permit."

Tonight the Republican candidates speak at rallies in Adams and North Adams. In addition, as guest speaker, there will be Lewis O. Barrows, Republican governor-elect of Maine.

has been with him constantly since his arrival in this country.

Cardinal O'Connell was in the Conference Hall of the seminary presiding over the gathering of curates when the visiting cardinal's machine drew up and it was Monsignor Richard J. Haberlin, vice-general of the diocese, who rushed out to the door to greet the guest.

On the arm of Monsignor Haberlin, Cardinal Pacelli entered the hall and was greeted by Cardinal O'Connell, then was seated in the center of the rostrum with the Boston cardinal on his right and Bishop Spellman on his left.

TOUCHING REUNION

It was a touching reunion between the two princes of the Catholic Church, for they had known each other well in Rome. And Cardinal O'Connell recalled that fact as he made the address of welcome to the visiting prelate.

"A true Roman of the Catholic heirarchy," he hailed Cardinal Pacelli, "and one we are proud to greet as a representative of the Holy Father."

Cardinal Pacelli, an imposing figure, more than six feet tall, spare, with ascetic features, flashing eyes and a dynamic personality, returned the greeting in rather halting English, but with pronounced emphasis on his words.

"I thank you for your kind words of welcome," he said. "It is most distinctly an occasion for me to be here.

"There is no place more appropriate for the conference you are having. I have always admired The Catholicity of the people of Boston and the spirituality of Catholic New England is known throughout the world under the leadership of the great Catholic hierarchy here."

POSE FOR PRESS

Afterwards, the two cardinals, Bishop Spellman and Monsignor Haberlin posed for press photographers, then went to the administration building, where Father Walsh met them and conducted them into the chapel.

Three hundred theological students were gathered there, and Cardinal Pacelli, answering a request of Father Walsh, gave the apostolic blessing in the name of Pope Pius XI.

The distinguished visitor was hailed by Father Walsh as "one who shares most intimately with the Holy Father the heavy burden of these troubled days."

"We see in Your Eminence," the rector said, "the able representative chosen to carry on the difficult mission at Berlin during the World War and, afterwards, one of the instruments of Divine Providence in bringing to a successful issue the Treaty of the Lateran."

GO FOR WALK

Cardinal Pacelli and Cardinal O'Connell went off alone for a walk through the seminary grounds after this ceremony and, later, the Italian prelate was the luncheon guest of Cardinal O'Connell in his residence adjoining the seminary.

The papal secretary was scheduled to return to New York early tomorrow afternoon.

Meanwhile, Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit radio priest, was resting today at Great Barrington, the guest of Frank Keelon, a close associate. He left Boston before Cardinal Pacelli arrived.

Questioned as to whether he would visit Cardinal Pacelli, Fr. Coughlin said:

"I believe in observing the code of ethics and not enter anything until I am invited."

He declined to give any explanation for his unexpectedly long stay in Massachusetts other than that he was "resting."

DOROTHY ALL DOLLED UP

Editor's Note: Miss Dorothy Kilgallen, International News Service, New York Journal and Boston Evening American reporter, is racing around the world in an effort to be first back in New York after a globe-girdling trip of three weeks or less. Miss Kilgallen's latest dispatch follows.

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

(Copyright, 1936, by International News Service, New York Evening Journal and Boston Evening American.)

Aboard S. S. President Pierce, En Route to Manila, Oct 14—Through one of those dizzying astronomical phenomena known only to Einstein and his relatives—or is it relativity?—I've lost an hour a day ever since I started on this globe-girdling jaunt from Lakehurst, N. J., but today I cheated Father Time out of 10 years, at least.

And while I've learned to have all the respect in the world for such swift means of transportation as dirigibles and 200-miles-an-hour airplanes, I must admit it was no modern masterpiece of mechanical ingenuity that handed me this decade on a silver platter.

It was instead an unknown [illegible] hero I encountered in a cubicle deep on a lower deck of the President Pierce.

It was, to be exact, the hair dresser.

There were waves both aloft and below when I flew across the Atlantic in the Hindenburg. There was a vestige of a roll in my coiffure in Frankfort.

But the ringlets went in Rangoon, the curls bid farewell in Calcutta and the bangs if I had any would surely have straggled away in Bangkok. Hongkong made of me (financially speaking) a King Kong, and my first real glance into a full-length mirror aboard this ship on the broad Pacific sent me dashing for the beauty parlor.

And, oh, how I'd like to catch up with my fast-traveling rival, H. R. Ekins, who is now at Guam aboard the Hawaiian Clipper.

I will be [illegible] aboard the China Clipper. And so will Leo Kieran, who is pacing the promenade deck of the President Pierce with me.

Walking aboard the President Pierce at Hong Kong was one of the real thrills of the trip.

In a [illegible] the liner pulled out of the harbor, which was filled with Chinese fishing sampans occupied by one, two, several and perhaps a dozen families aboard each.

Sails With Her 15 Pieces of Baggage

Off sailed the American export liner Excambion to New York today, and off sailed Miss Phyllis Allen, Arlington Heights, with her 15 pieces of baggage.

But, because the Excambion isn't due to make another crossing to the Mediterranean for two weeks, Miss Allen will have just that length of time to make up her mind whether she'll go back to Cannes, France, with her baggage or pay $600 in customs fees.

The Arlington Heights girl ran into snag here when customs agents reminded her that a citizen can't bring in more than $100 worth of goods from abroad duty free. She said she was a citizen but a non-resident, and wanted an exemption.

When she didn't get it, she announced her visit to home was off and that she'd rather go back to France than pay $600. So she boarded the same ship that had brought her here last Monday.

Mother Saved From Jail in Dope Case

Assistant United States Attorney William T. McCarthy condemned a Malden woman for trafficking in narcotics today, but because she is the mother of four he saved her from jail by asking clemency in federal court.

Judge George C. Sweeney gave Mrs. Eugenia [illegible], 35, of Lyme street, Malden, a suspended sentence of 18 months on each of three counts, suspended a fine of $100 and probation for three years.

The woman, last April, figured in a 75-mile chase after narcotic agents raided a Malden house. She pleaded guilty to selling dope and conspiring with others to violate the Harrison law.

Autumnal Styles For 5 Miladies

BIZZZZZZZZ!—New fall bonnets, the very latest in head wear, evoked this intimate fashion conversation between quintuplet style experts, Annette (the lady with the big smile) and Cecile, who's trying hard to get a word in here and there.

"THE RIGHT TILT of milady's chapeau makes one look so much younger," Quintuplet Emilie tells her less-fashionable sister, Marie, as she adjusts Marie's new fall bonnet to the proper angle. Perhaps Marie would rather look a bit older. Whatever the case, she wishes this tugging and pulling would stop.

Officer Beaten, So. End Trio Held

Three men were arrested today after a police officer had been beaten up at Dover and Washington streets.

The officer, Arthur E. O'Connor, attached to the Special Service squad, was rescued by brother squad members, Patrolman Peter [illegible] and William O'Connor, who had been investigating a suspicious looking car a short distance away.

Arrested after a fierce battle the trio was taken to police headquarters where they gave their names as [illegible], 27, of West [illegible] street, South End; [illegible], 22, of [illegible] street, East Boston, and [illegible] Lefave, 25, of [illegible] street, Portland, Me.

They were charged with attacking and beating a police officer and face arraignment in municipal court today.

O'Connor, who suffered severe facial lacerations in the battle, was treated by Dr. Joseph W. Devine, police surgeon.

NEEDY Boy Admits MURDER

'JAILBIRD'S' TRAGIC STORY

New Bedford, Oct. 14—A 19-year-old boy who tried so hard to go straight that he was working for $6.50 a week when he was fired as a former "jailbird," confessed to murder here today, according to police.

The youth, Sidney Reich of Beckham street, confessed, police said, that he shot Hartley Wood, 74-year-old storekeeper, in an attempted robbery October 5. In district court he entered a plea of guilty, but it wasn't accepted, under the law.

Confession came shortly after 5 o'clock this morning after young Reich had been questioned intermittantly by Chief Inspector Walter Almond since 10:30 a. m. yesterday.

Tragic Story

While Chief Inspector Almond, a veteran of 45 years in the police department, has no sympathy with murderers, he declared today that the tragic affair happened because somebody "squealed" on the boy when he had tried to start life anew.

"Young Reich came home here a month ago," the inspector said.

"He had been in scrapes ever since he was a young boy, but none had been serious until he ran away to Missouri a few years ago.

"There he was convicted of burglary and he served 35 months in state prison. But he wanted to go straight when he came back. He is a motherless boy—his mother has been dead for a long time.

"He got himself a job in an underwear factory. His wage was only $6.50 a week, but he worked hard at his job.

"He had been on that job only nine days when some busybody went to the boss and told him that Reich was an ex-convict. The boy was discharged. He told me he became desperate for money.

"We learned from another youth that Reich had asked him two weeks ago if he would go on 'a job' with him. The attempted holdup and the shooting of Mr. Wood followed.

Needed Help

"The boy told me hadn't intended to kill. He said he instinctively pulled the trigger when the storekeeper grappled with him. I've been a long time doing police work and I know all the excuses, but I believe him. Not that that will help. Murder has its own price.

"But it's a shame that this happened. Two lives gone. And all because someone wanted to kick a boy down in the mire after he had paid the penalty for a former misstep.

"I can't help feeling that a boy like this might have turned out differently if he got a helping hand when he showed he wanted it, instead of a kick downward again."

And there was only $3.50 in the cash drawer.

Bette Davis 'Required' Guest With President

Star Is Called 'Rather Naughty'

Seeks Contract Abrogation

London, Oct. 14 — Bette Davis, blonde film star and former Newton, Mass., girl, involved in a breach of contract suit brought by her studio, was "required to attend a dinner at which the President of the United States was guest" and seeks to abrogate her contract on that ground, it was charged in King's bench division today.

Counsel for Warner Brothers, which is seeking to prevent her appearance on the stage or in British movies, characterized her as "a rather naughty young lady who wants more money."

The characterization was made by Sir Patrick Hastings, representing the Hollywood film company, which obtained a temporary injunction September 9.

The film star, wearing a red and blue checked tweed coat and matching beret, sat in the courtroom with her attorney while Sir Patrick outlined the basis for the injunction suit.

"What this young lady is seeking to do is in effect to tear up her contract and say that whether she is right or wrong the court will not grant an injunction against her," Sir Patrick told the judge.

More Money

Referring to Miss Davis' contention the contract had been broken by Warner Brothers itself, Hastings declared:

"In regard to these I venture to suggest your lordship will doubtless come to the conclusion this is really a rather naughty young lady and what she wants is more money."

Sir Patrick asserted that on one occasion Miss Davis "was required to attend a dinner which the President of the United States attended."

"I have no doubt she enjoyed herself very much, but she said we required her to do it and that it was a breach of contract which entitled her to go and act for somebody else," he said.

To support his contention that Miss Davis wanted more money, Sir Patrick read a letter which, he said, she wrote to the head of Warner Brothers.

The letter related that after a long vacation "I am so rested it hurts." It expressed Miss Davis' jubilation at being able to work.

"Mentally, change does me good and makes me do better work," the letter went on.

"Also, I am anxious to become known as a great actress — I might, who can tell?

"As a happy person I can work like hell.

"As an unhappy one I make myself and everyone around me unhappy.

"I know you do, too, in a business where you have a fickle public to depend on.

"Money should be made when you mean something, not when the public has had time to tell you to go to hell."

Fights Injunction Suit in London

One Man Injured, 3 Held in Riot

East Douglas, Oct. 14—One man was seriously injured and three others were arrested and charged with assault with intent to murder as new strike disturbances flared outside the Hayward-Schuster mills here today.

Those arrested, John Cencak, 50; Joseph Kleija, 40, and William Andrysick, 32, all of East Douglas, were arraigned in Whitinsville district court where their cases were continued until next Wednesday. Each was held in $2000 bail.

The "holiday" was called on recommendation of the New England Textile Council in protest against the injunction issued by Judge Winfred H. Whiting.

Find Woman's Body On Revere Beach

The body of a woman about 60 years old, not immediately identified, was today washed up on the sand at Revere Beach, near the foot of Revere street.

Joseph A. Fulton, of Putnam road, Oak Island, a passerby, discovered the body and notified police.

No marks of violence were found on the body which was fully clothed.

The woman was described as weighing about 125 pounds, medium complexion, brown hair, five feet five inches tall and having false teeth. She was dressed in a black dress, shoes and stockings, a dark blue coat with a brown fur collar and grey cotton gloves.

DUKE'S Riches Hunt VAIN

BID FOR 2 U. S HEIRESSES

By Associated Press

London, Oct. 14—The seventh Duke of Leinster, with gross liabilities listed at nearly $700,000 and assets at nil, told a receiver in bankruptcy court today how he went to America in 1928 "with the idea of marrying somebody rich."

The duke, appearing for public examination on demand of his creditors, testified he made the trip "deliberately" with the idea of recouping his bank balance.

But that the plan fell through after he had been in touch with two prospective brides. These were not named.

U. S. Bridal Bids

He disclosed he had entered the American heiress market stipulating the woman he would marry would have to pay all his debts.

Two women entered the scene as possibilities. Negotiations with the first were broken off after "only a few weeks," he said. Negotiations with the second lasted "six months."

The 44-year-old duke was married in December, 1932, to Mrs. Raffaelle Van Neck of New York. That was about a month after his engagement to the second "possibility" broke down, he said.

His first wife, who died last year, was May Etheridge. They were divorced in Scotland in 1930.

The Duke of Leinster created an international stir in 1922 by proposing to race across the ocean in a ketch and came to New York to arrange the race. However, he returned to face his creditors.

Miss Etheridge, former musical comedy star, who was the duke's first wife, was found dead in February, 1935, in a bungalow near Brighton, England. Authorities said a bottle near her body contained a sleeping potion.

The Irish peer married her in 1913. She had come to his attention when the leading lady in her show became ill and she was given the star's part. They had one son, the present Marquis of Kildare.

Fr. Coughlin Holds Fast Train Minute

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 14 (AP)—New York Central Railroad officials revealed today they had been obliged to hold the Niagara, west-bound flyer, for nearly a minute this morning so the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin could board it.

Captain Joseph B. Boyle, the railroad's police chief here, said Father Coughlin had telephoned from Great Barrington, Mass., he was motoring to Albany and wanted to catch the train.

Captain Boyle said the priest arrived at 12:41 a. m., E.S.T., raced through the station and climbed aboard the train, which was scheduled to leave at 12:40.

LANDON SCORES 'AUTOCRACY' OF DEAL

DEMANDS PRESIDENT STATE STAND ON CONSTITUTION

Detroit, Oct. 14—The text of Governor Alfred M. Landon's address here follows:

Tonight I am going to discuss the threat of the present administration to our American form of government. I am going to discuss it in terms of the rights and opportunities secured to us as citizens by the Constitution of the United States.

Make no mistake about it: this threat to our form of government is a major issue in this campaign. It is time to bring it out into the open.

We live in a world in which human liberties are falling. In nation after nation ideals of democracy have been swept away.

In every case the process of destruction follows the same pattern. First, the Executive sets himself up as a popular leader and, in the name of national emergency, asks that additional authority be given to him.

EXECUTIVE ALL-POWERFUL

Then the legislature gradually yields more and more power to the Executive until the legislature becomes a mere instrument of the Executive.

Finally the courts of law are undermined and the judiciary ceases to be a protection for the people.

When this final stage is reached — when the independence of the courts is destroyed — the rights and liberties of the people are gone. The people are then at the mercy of the executive. The executive is all powerful.

We have seen the results of this process abroad. The first steps have already been taken here. Think back over the last three and one-half years, and see what has happened.

In the name of emergency, the President asked for and received the right to change the amount of gold in the dollar.

In the name of emergency, the President has accepted authority to issue three billion dollars of greenbacks.

In the name of emergency, the President asked for and received the power to set up a so-called stabilization fund of two billion dollars. He can use this fund secretly to buy or sell gold, silver, and foreign exchange at any price he sees fit. And he can use it to control the price of United States government bonds.

CONTROLS CURRENCY

In short, the President, in the name of emergency, has acquired almost complete control over the money and credit system of the nation. Think what that means. One man, without notice, can alter the value of the dollar — can threaten the savings and the purchasing power of the wages of every man and woman in this country.

Also, in the name of emergency, the President asked for and received authority to determine how much agriculture and industry could produce and sell; at what wages and for how many hours labor could work.

In the name of emergency, the President asked for and received, appropriations from Congress to be spent at his discretion. These so-called blank checks have totalled thirteen and one-half billion dollars.

In other words, during a period of less than three and one-half years, one President has been given the power to spend almost without restrictions eight times as much as the discretionary spending power given to 30 Presidents over a period of 143 years.

Congress in effect gave up its Constitutional powers and surrendered its control over the spending policy of the government. Yet one of the most important victories in the history of popular government was that which won for the people's representatives control over the public purse.

Congress should never abdicate the rights won by the blood of men determined to be free.

"REPEAL POWERS"

Through this transfer of power over the purse-strings to the executive, he has been able to override the rights of local communities and the states. He has been able to accomplish indirectly what the Constitution forbids him to do directly.

It is a shameful thing when our mayors and the governors of our several states must appear before the chief executive as supplicants, or else lose their share of the federal handout.

If I am elected, I shall recommend to Congress the repeal of all acts giving autocratic powers to the chief executive.

I have listed only a few new powers asked for the President. These powers were granted with the understanding that they were only temporary. But after the powers had been obtained, and after the emergency was clearly over, we were told that another emergency would be created if the power was given up.

In other words, the concentration of power in the hands of the President was not a question of temporary emergency. It was a question of permanent national policy. In my opinion, the emergency of 1933 was a mere excuse.

If there has been a change of policy it is time the American people were taken into the confidence of the administration and informed of its plans.

Does the administration plan to re-enact the NRA? Does it intend to return to the control of food products by Washington? If it does one it must do the other. If we have an NRA we must have an AAA. If we have an AAA we must have an NRA. No nation can continue half regimented and half free.

Which course does this administration propose to follow?

There is only one man who can answer this question and that man is the candidate for re-election to the presidency.

National economic planning—the term used by this administration to describe its policy—violates the basic ideals of the American system. It starts on the assumption that the people are not capable of looking after their own affairs. It says that America's greatness was just an accident.

This is not true. It is a libel on our people.

From the day our nation was founded we have worked and saved and sacrificed for our greatness.

Now this administration would put an end to individual effort. It has concluded that America must have a national economic plan. And without giving the people any choice in the matter, it has attempted to force such a plan upon our nation.

BRAINS IN DETROIT

Now any administration that attempts to run the daily lives of its people, to make their business decisions, to supervise their farms, is working on the theory that it is far wiser than its people. But the present administration goes beyond this. It apparently believes that with the concentration of power in Washington came a concentration of intelligence.

But when I look around and see the automobiles on our roads, I sometimes suspect that right here in Detroit there are a few brains tucked away that somehow have escaped the notice of Washington.

The government at Washington did not build the automobile industry. The government in Washington did not make it possible for 20 million of our citizens to own automobiles. The government in Washington did not give employment to millions in this new industry and the dozens of related industries.

What built the automobile industry has done so much for this country and its people? The very qualities that his administration holds up to scorn—American initiative, American energy and American frugality. Yet today we are told that initiative must be controlled, that energy and hard work must be restricted, that saving has become a crime against society.

The pioneers of Detroit dreamed of producing automobiles at so low a price that they could be owned by the many. They have made their dream come true.

The automobile industry, instead of talking about recovery, has worked for recovery. This industry has led the way back from depression. And I do not think it is without significance that this industry resisted at every turn the compulsory regulations imposed by the NRA. Indeed, one of its most distinguished leaders never signed the code of the Blue Eagle.

The automobile industry was not content to stand still. Instead it used all the intelligence it could command to improve its product, lower its price, and enlarge its market. In this way it has returned thousands to work—real work at real wages.

There could be no better example to show that the need of this country is not for a government that attempts to direct and manage our lives. The need is for a government that will protect our rights and foster American initiative, energy and frugality.

I do not believe that greater and greater concentration of power in the hands of the federal government, and particularly in the executive, is either necessary or wise.

I believe we should continue to use our 48 sovereign states to try out new ideas in the field of government. However, if I am elected and find that new powers are needed by the federal government, I shall favor Congress going to the people openly and ask for such powers through a constitutional amendment.

The people must be given full opportunity to debate the issues involved before they take the momentous step of changing the charter of their freedom.

This charter—our Constitution—has served us well. It served our fathers well.

We have only to look abroad to see that in many countries the charter of freedom is no more.

Let us not forget this! In many countries of this world today the people no longer have the freedom to sing in open worship of the faith of their fathers. They gather in hidden places, and while they sing, the soldiery of despotism is pounding at their doors and carrying away their pastors and their priests.

In those countries freedom of thought is gone. Freedom of speech is gone. Freedom of the press is gone. Freedom of worship is gone.

We in America cannot ignore these warnings. We must not, out of regard for any man or men, blind ourselves to the forces that are loose in the world. It is not a question of any man or men. It is a question of human freedom.

STATE DEMOCRATIC SPLIT IN COUGHLIN'S WAKE

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Democratic hopes of retaining Massachusetts in the New Deal column have been badly shattered by the tremendous display of strength by the followers of the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Shrewd political observers, amazed over the depth of the bitterness shown to the Roosevelt clique of advisers, are pointing out that a big majority of the National Union for Social Justice nominally vote the Democratic ticket in this state.

To these trained students it means but one thing—that the Democratic party in Massachusetts is hopelessly split with the election but three weeks away.

The jolt came at a time when the Democratic leaders supporting Roosevelt were being encouraged by the Democratic mayoralty victory in Worcester, big rallies in the western part of the state and record-breaking registration of voters.

ACTIVITY'S DANGER

Insofar as the registrations are concerned, many old timers have felt the Democrats, in relying upon these additions to the voting lists as a sure sign of party success, to be in grave error.

Generally, it is argued, when the people show unusual activity in politics and get registered to greater degrees than before, it means that they are out to stop someone. That someone is usually the party in power.

The Rev. Coughlin views the big meeting which was held at National League Field as "a huge success."

That the big audience would have been a great deal larger but for the weather, Columbus Day activities and football games is his belief, shared by local leaders of the movement.

"I am highly satisfied with the rally," the radio priest commented, in a late interview at the Copley Plaza Hotel, where he is resting.

"President Roosevelt," he reiterated, "should repudiate by action and not by words."

The priest was referring to the fact that the President is still surrounded by such officials who are not Democrats as Secretary Harry Hopkins, Rexford Tugwell and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Also to the fact that he has not repudiated David Dubinsky, Socialist, and Roosevelt elector in New York.

These officials he classified as the "back seat drivers of the Roosevelt administration."

If Roosevelt is re-elected the country will be on the "brink of an economic social crisis," he predicted.

In commenting on his controversy with a Boston reporter in Providence, R. I., the Rev. Coughlin objected strenuously to printed reports that he would "get" the reporter.

He pointed out that cultured people do not use the word "get," that it was a gangster expression.

FIRST SPEECH

The Rev. Coughlin said that new leaders for the Rhode Island organization will be announced next Saturday in the National Union for Social Justice publication.

Former State Auditor Francis X. Hurley, New England manager with headquarters on Franklin street, will make his first speech of the campaign in Hartford on October 17.

Former Governor Ely, back from a speaking tour of the Middle West and southeastern coast states, is reported as pleased over the outlook.

Those close to Ely say he is confident that Governor Landon, Republican candidate for President, will be elected on November 3.

CROSSLEY POLL

Small Vote Seen for Lemke

By ARCHIBALD CROSSLEY
Director of the Crossley National Poll

COPYRIGHT, 1936, KING FEATURES SYND., INC.

New York, Oct. 14—After all the early hurly-burly about third parties and split-offs, or divisions in the Republican and Democratic parties, the nation-wide Crossley Poll of voter-opinion brings us today the following definite announcement:

In this election all the minor parties, the Lemke-Coughlin ticket included, will poll a small vote.

Probably there has not in years been an election in which the minor parties are due to poll a smaller percentage of the total vote than they will receive on November 3. Certainly there have been several previous campaigns within living memory in which third-party voting has had a vastly greater influence than it will have this time.

Big Party Year

Taking the nation as a whole, and lumping all the off-standard parties together, the figure runs about 3 per cent. This is far from the 3,000,000 voters which were prophesied for Lemke alone and amounts to an epitaph for the gaudy dreams of the Townsendites, the late Huey Long's share-the-wealth followers, the "production for use" factions, the Maxians et id omne genus. This is emphatically a major party year.

This may be due partly to the movement of minor party adherents of every variety into the Roosevelt camp, usually with the proviso that while he does not precisely reflect their ideas, he none the less "paves the way" toward their ideas of Utopia. That this situation may have alienated votes from Roosevelt comparable to votes it has gained him, is reflected in some of the personal reasons given for a preference for Landon given by voters to interviewers for the Crossley poll.

Appeal Fails

In some past elections, the third party vote of course has assumed much importance. No need to recount that history, which is familiar to all students of politics. But as far as the present campaign goes, we can forget the minor parties in terms of electoral votes, as they do not appear at all likely to capture in a single vote.

When the claims of three or four months ago are recalled, this seems a dramatic proof of the vital quality of the major-party race.

The Crossley Poll's dramatic revelations of the course of the campaign will be continued tomorrow in the Boston Evening American.

TORSO'S DISPOSAL IN POND CONSIDERED UNLIKELY

(This is the second in a series of articles discussing possibilities in the baffling Grayce Asquith case.)

It is almost impossible to draw any positive conclusions from the moves of a man who has committed murder and is attempting to conceal the corpse.

Though some of these acts may show his mind to have been grooved in cunning, they provide no assurance that others were not committed in abject stupidity. Because in the act of murder itself there is no common sense or logic, and the brain that inspires it must be under terrific stress during attempts to obliterate evidence of the crime.

Any inconsistent act may result from the abnormality.

Still, it seems unlikely that when the slayer of Grayce Asquith—if Grayce Asquith was slain—set about dismembering her body, he did so with any intention of trying to conceal it in Whitman pond, a stone-toss from the bungalow from which her absence must eventually arouse suspicion.

Something may have happened to cause him to put part of the body in there but it seems unreasonable to suppose he had any such plan in mind when he began his gruesome task.

Unless the remote possibility of some horrible form of vengeance is considered, dismemberment was committed for the purpose of trying to conceal the corpse for all time or, failing in that, to prevent identification of the victim should any part of the body be recovered.

Sought Distance

Disposal of the body as far from the scene of the crime as could be undertaken with any degree of safety, and the hiding of different parts of the body in different places would seem to be a course to follow.

Always keeping in mind, however, that fear or conscience is tapping at the shoulder of the man engaged in such a task and may cause him, at any minute, to abandon any particular plan he may have in mind and do a stupid, inconsistent thing.

Had the slayer considered Whitman pond as a hiding place, he could have concealed the body in it, weighted down, without undertaking dismemberment.

That dismemberment occurred indicates he had in mind disposing of the remains at a more distant point and may have had in mind distributing the body in different hiding places. The dismemberment permitted of transportation that would not, if noticed, arouse suspicion.

It seems well established that the legs found off the East Boston-Governor's Island shore were never in Whitman pond. Dismemberment itself is an argument against such a possibility.

Another is that had they been, they must have been carried a distance of two miles or more from the pond, through a culvert down a stream to Back river and thence another three miles or so across the harbor to the point where they were found.

Had they been sufficiently decomposed to have floated such a distance they would probably have been caught by rock or tree along shore in the stream before ever they reached Back river. Had they not floated, the current was hardly enough to stir them along the bottom out of the clutches of sunken debris.

So it may be concluded that the legs, at least, were never in Whitman pond nor the stream that courses from it toward the sea.

As between legs, arms, head and torso—theorizing that a complete dismemberment took place—the head could be expected to provide the quickest means of identification, the legs next quickest, torso third, the arms fourth, granting that any such diabolical criminal would have had the foresight to have removed rings from the hands and that no fingerprints of the victim existed.

It might even be said that the legs would be in third or last place of such an order, and this would ordinarily be so. In this case, however, the unusually small feet might provide a change in the order.

If the legs, second, third or fourth on the list of identification possibilities, were not hidden in the watery front door of the murder cottage, does it not seem unreasonable to suppose that the head, more easily identified, was concealed in the pond?

The arms, possibly yes. The head no, unless the legs, too, were hidden there, and its appears definitely that they were not.

Had Auto

Now it may be presumed that the person who tried to hide the body had an automobile. This presumption is based upon the conclusion that the legs were originally hidden in salt water, some three miles from the scene, and that the slayer did not go trudging along a roadway with them wrapped up in his arms, although the bent position of the legs might indicate such a possibility, extremely remote.

If that possibility is considered, one still must give him a car for transportation of the rest of the body and if it is argued he merely walked away with the legs, hiding the rest of the body close to the scene, the answer is that such an act would be without any purpose of deception whatever.

So it is to be presumed the slayer had a car, and this presumption opens up a field of wide conjecture in which some strange points are to be considered.

Not the least strange of these is that one man sought for questioning about the case had no automobile and two automobiles of another have been seized and closely inspected without giving any evidence of use for transporting the body.

Claims Confession In Extortion Plot

Typhoon Death List Reaches 408

Manila, Oct. 14 (AP)—The death list from the Philippines' most disastrous typhoon jumped to 408 today. Little hope was held for 600 others, reported missing.

Belated reports from the San Narcisco district of Zambalese province, northwest of Manila, said 150 miners were drowned by a wall of water which swept down on them as they were crossing a river.

Famine faced the survivors of last wek's three-day typhoon, particularly in districts where relief agencies have been halted by floods.

Ironically, floods left residents of the damaged areas suffering from thirst. Water supplies were destroyed and natives did not drink for fear of a typhoid epidemic.

From the stricken region came urgent calls for vaccine to fight the dread diseases of the Orient—cholera, typhoid, dysentery.

Forty-two crew members and passengers were lost when the inter-island motorship Sugbu sank in the typhoon off Siquijor, it was reported here today from Cebu.

ANOTHER OF 'MERRY WIDOW' MEN FRIENDS MISSING

head, torso and arms of the harbor sack victim whom police say was Mrs. Asquith — another man who was friendly with the widow and has been casually questioned in connection with the case was being kept under surveillance.

At the same time two other detective details were sent out with orders to obtain rooms and keep around-the-clock vigil in two Boston apartment houses.

DRAG IN HARBOR

Dragging of Whitman pond continued today and for the first time Weymouth police began digging into the cellar of the Asquith bungalow in search of missing parts of the body. There is a concrete floor in the garage and in half of the cellar.

Search was also made of a small island in the pond and of a cemetery close to the pond.

The Boston police boat Watchman dragged the harbor bottom off Piers 5 and 6, East Boston, where on October 10 the propellors of a steamer churned up a burlap bag which sank again. This is not far from the place where the dismembered legs were found.

LYONS "CLUE" FAILS

A flurry of excitement attended the search for Lyons today when the New York-registered car in which it was reported to police he had been seen riding in the South End was found at Columbus avenue and Pembroke street, South End. Patrolman A. R. Augusta thought it had been abandoned.

Headquarters fingerprint men were rushing to examine it when its owner and a friend appeared. They had merely parked to make a call.

The two men were taken to headquarters where they satisfied everybody that neither was Lyons. They were released and the South End clue was added to the many "busts."

Lyons, a disabled war veteran with no known income, except a $50-a-month pension from the government, dropped out of sight the night of the alleged back-sack murder.

Still entertaining the theory that Lyons may have met his death at the hands of the same brutal assassin who slew and dismembered the "Merry Widow" of Weymouth, police were concentrating, nevertheless, today upon a nation-wide search calculated to bring the missing man to light if he is still alive.

Held to be of little value today were tips placing Lyons at Darien, Ct.; Bangor, Me., and several other New England points. Police were still checking the story of a Boston witness who claims to have seen Lyons here on the night of Monday, October 5, the date of the discovery of the legs and lower torso in the harbor.

In Dedham jail today, "material witness" Oscar V. Bartolini was in recovered spirits and health, after a temporary collapse.

NEEDY OF CITY TO GET COAL

Acting Mayor John I. Fitzgerald today ordered James A. McMurry, chairman of the Boston board of overseers of the public welfare, to provide immediately coal orders to needy residents of this city during the present cold spell.

This action by Fitzgerald came after McMurry flatly refused to consider City Councillor Clement A. Norton's demand that coal be provided at once.

Acting Mayor Fitzgerald told McMurry to instruct welfare visitors to issue orders at once for 100 pounds of coal for every needy family.

The acting mayor said:

"It's outrageous that small children and aged persons should be suffering in drafty tenements in this city during this cold spell. There is no excuse for it and I have ordered that this condition end at once."

Only about an hour earier McMurry had said:

"In so far as the board of overseers are concerned coal will be delivered to the welfare recipients on November 15, as originally planned."

Beauty and 18 Men Deny Sweeps Fraud

Miss Jennie Mae White of Milford, a prize-winning beauty, and 18 men pleaded not guilty in Federal court today to a charge of using the mails to defraud in connection with the Montreal Hospital Post Graduates Sweepstakes more than a year ago. Trial was set for October 27 by Judge George C. Sweeney.

Attorney William L. Lewis, counsel for several of the defendants, saying he was busy in the political campaign, and that his associate, Matthew McGrath, was similarly engaged, asked postponement until November 10, but Assistant U. S. Attorney Henry M. Leen argued the case had been dragging along since June.

Senator Austin Says:

Palestine Boasts Of Cash Surplus

This is the third of a series of articles by Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont, a member of the Hearst Senatorial Unofficial Commission to Palestine, giving his report on the crisis in the Holy Land.

Senator Austin is a member of the Senate judiciary committee and is a constitutional lawyer of distinction. While in Palestine he made a special study of the mandate and the obligations of the United States in connection with its administration.

By WARREN R. AUSTIN
United States Senator from Vermont.

Copyright, 1936, American Newspaper, Inc.

Palestine is probably the only country in the world today where the treasury can boast of a surplus adequate for two years of the government's budget.

This surplus has been accumulated during the last four years, when immigration was heaviest and government expenditures were on the increase.

This phenomenon is understandable in the light of finding that about $400,000,000 of capital has been brought to Palestine by the Jews all over the world, and constructive use made of this huge fund in agriculture and industry and public works and services.

Measured on a per capita basis, each of the 250,000 Jewish immigrants who entered Palestine since the establishment of the mandate carried into the country $1800. Of course, a substantial part of this sum represents endowments by coreligionists abroad.

This singular feature of the Jewish colonization of Palestine is emphasized by the fact that over $50,000,000 had been invested by Jews at large, through national funds, without any expectation of a commercial return.

These funds have been applied to the direct reclamation of the land, with benefits to all the inhabitants.

Palestine has escaped in a remarkable degree the excessive cost of capital which accompanied all colonizing projects. It suffers from no crushing or even moderately heavy interest burden. It has imported large amounts of caiptal, but its external debt is negligible.

"Other parts of the world have been developed principally by the pioneering labor of persons of little or no wealth, equipped with capital provided by a totally different body of people," observes the review of the Midland Bank.

"The result has been that year by year the developing country has had to provide, out of its own surplus or by fresh borrowings, a growing amount of funds abroad for interest on its external debts.

"In Palestine, by contrast, the settlers have brought with them the great bulk of the funds required for development, so that a relatively small obligation remains to remit abroad for interest."

Foreign Trade

Significant evidence of development of Palestine in the last 18 years is furnished by the growth of its foreign trade. In 1920-21, Palestine imported goods valued at $26,000,000. In 1935 the imports amounted to $90,000,000. During the same period there was a five-fold expansion of exports.

When the Palestinian foreign trade is compared with that of other Arab countries, the result is remarkable.

On a per capita basis, Palestine's foreign trade is almost four times as great as that of Egypt, six more times that of Syria, and five and one-half times that of Iraq.

This is reflected in the standard of living to be observed in the Holy Land.

The astonishing progress in foreign commerce made by Palestine because of Jewish endeavor is in turn responsible for the development of the country's shipping facilities, such as the building of the new port of Haifa and the projected construction of a harbor in Tel Aviv.

It has been justly declared that these are developments of revolutionary consequence to the arterial system of the British empire.

Palestine has acquired a new strategic role as an outlet for the Mosul oil fields, as a key to both land and air routes to the East. Its ports are performing functions hitherto fulfilled by the Egyptian ports on the Suez Canal.

Haifa is on the way to become the key Mediterranean harbor to the hinterland of Syria, Iraq, and Persia. Its tonnage has more than doubled since its completion a few years ago.

It is apparent that the influx of Jewish immigration into Palestine, accompanied as it is by a steady influx of new capital, lifted the country upward while the rest of the world was sinking into the depths of depression. Bank deposits steeply increased in recent years. Business expanded at an accelerated rate.

In 1934, when Jewish immigration reached large-scale proportions, 227 new companies, both Jewish and Arab, were incorporated with a total authorized capital of $11,000,000. An additional 35 companies trebled their capital.

The revenue of the government grew correspondingly, and its beneficent expenditures were widely diffused. Thus, the treasury was able to remit a large part of the agricultural taxes which weighed heavily on the poor Arab peasants and to launch public works for the employment mainly of Arab labor.

Dynamic Power

The dynamic power which the Jewish pioneers brought to Palestine cannot, however, be measured merely with yardsticks of economics. It has redeemed and liberated the soul of the Jew.

When the conscience of mankind recognized the right of the Jews to have a national home in the land where their kings ruled, their prophets led, and their psalmists sang, where their religion, language, culture, ideals and folk-lore were developed and changed the history of the world, it set in motion a powerful national revival.

It was natural that this resurrection of the Jewish national spirit in the land of their ancestors should flower forth, among certain elements, in an ambition for a Jewish state.

It is an ambition which is not justified by the terms of the mandate, although Secretary of State Hughes, in his communication to Balfour of January 27, 1922, referred to the Jewish National Home under the mandate as "a Jewish State."

This ambition was in direct conflict with the Pan-Arab nationalist movement, and it served to sharpen the conflict between the two main elements of the population of Palestine.

Who Keeps Them Idle, Industry or Roosevelt?

President Roosevelt, as of April 1, 1936, had allotted $177,876,749 of the 1935-1936 Federal Relief Fund to the states of Mississippi, Arkansas and Tennessee. This money was appropriated by Congress for workers "made idle by the depression."

In the three states mentioned above, President Roosevelt is using the money on workers made idle by his AAA program. The curtailment of cotton production did away with a million jobs in the cotton states. These workers went on relief and WPA.

The Supreme Court overturned the AAA.

Today there is a cotton crop but not the workers to handle it. Mississippi alone is clamoring for 10,000 cotton-pickers.

Roosevelt's WPA refuses to furnish the workers. It insists that they be supported by taxes wrung from those who Senator Russell of Georgia describes as "Yankees."

Cambridge Seeks Mystery Stabber

Cambridge police sought a mysterious stabber today as John Thompson, 21, of Market street, East Cambridge, recovered at his home from a knife wound in the left arm.

Thompson, who was treated at Cambridge City Hospital, told police he discovered he had been stabbed just after a tall, blond youth had jostled him in Central square.

Missing Man, 80, Found in Woods

Oak Bluffs, Oct. 14—Missing for several hours, Benjamin F. Kidder, 80, of Garrett avenue, was found in an exhausted condition in the woods near here by a large posse which had formed to search for him.

His absence was reported to police by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary G. Kidder. He was brought back to his home and placed under treatment for exposure.

The flavor of Jacob Ruppert beer is universally enjoyed because it is balanced —that's the secret. It is pleasantly tangy, but not over-bitter; rich and creamy, but not sweet; full-bodied and satisfying, but never heavy.

Such flavor is beyond description, but one taste of its superb mellowness will tell you why it is "America's Favorite." Ask for it by name!

BOSTON after DARK

By

GEORGE HOLLAND

IN A BURST OF DEADLINE INDUSTRY, Cole Porter has written a new song since "Red, Hot and Blue" opened in Boston, and from the first lead-sheet it may rank with the famous composer's best. It is called "Down in the Depths on the 90th Floor." Ethel Merman will sing it, and the number may be ready for spotting for Friday night . . . Porter has dedicated himself to writing yet another "sock" song for La Merman before the show swoops down on New York . . . And out of the show has gone a number entitled, "Goodbye, Little Dream, Goodbye," which sounded like a hit to at least one listener on opening night . . . Terrific pressure bears on a composer of a huge musical after the try-out critical verdicts are in . . . A predecessor of Composer Porter in the ranks of the music-writing greats, Victor Herbert, found himself all alone against such weighty opinions as those of Charles B. Dillingham, Fritzi Scheff and Henry Blossom, his book-writer. The show was "Mlle. Modiste," and it was being played, prior to New York, in Detroit . . . Herbert liked one of his songs very much. The others disdained it. It came very near not being published. The title was "Kiss Me Again." (No moral).

GEORGE HOLLAND

Literary Notes:

Noel Coward, whose nine one-act plays will find their author appearing for the first time on a Boston stage, October 19, has finished his autobiography, "Present Indicative" . . . Ethel Levy Cohan, first wife of George M. Cohan, is offering the story of her life to publishers.

Once Over Lightly:

You could get fresh liver in Boston yesterday. Restaurants couldn't scrape up as much as a pound Saturday in the markets . . . Dolly Stark, ace umpire in the National League until he quit in a salary row before last season, will settle in Boston if a broadcasting deal can be managed . . . Tom, the chimpanzee, favorite at the Franklin Park Zoo, banged a hoe against Dan Dougherty's ribs, breaking two of them. The chimp was fretful because he's in love with the monk-ess in the next cage, and they had boarded the couple off . . . Max Baer and Jimmy Durante embraced each other when they met at the Touraine last night. In embracing, The Nose has a swivel-arrangement for his neck which makes such a thing as an embrace fairly practicable . . . Joe Linsey leaves for Texas Thursday . . . The Shoe Style Show will be staged by Phil Mulhado Nov. 30 . . . Lee Shelly will have Don Noble as one of the vocalists for his opening at Levaggi's Thursday . . . Alice O'Leary goes to the Hotel Lenox Blue Train, where, with Paul Zara's trio she will, occasionally, complete a marvellous quartet. Alice will sing by herself chiefly, of course . . . Her husband, Adrian O'Brien, will be singing at Steuben's Vienna Room . . .

Theatrical Chatter:

Leslie Howard's coming in "Hamlet" next Monday recalls the story of a [illegible] an actor can't get these [illegible] days in Boston. [illegible] was making a farewell tour in "Hamlet" as the great Sothern. [illegible] had a captious critic [illegible] "Hamlet" or Mr. Sothern. "E. H. Sothern played 'Hamlet' last night," the critic wrote. "He played it until 11:45" . . . Gertrude Lawrence played Boston one time. That was in 1925 with "Charlot's Revue," and Beatrice Lillie and Jack Buchanan were her co-stars. The player Gertrude will come to Boston as Noel Coward's female star in those one-act plays . . . The two appeared in New York together in "Design for Living," but George Marshall's [illegible] Griffith played the leading [illegible] . . . And Mr. Coward was in London . . . [illegible] author of "[illegible] Room," has carried [illegible] a train for Chicago [illegible]. The [illegible] will open at the Belmont in New York a week from Monday . . . Richard Maney, the famous "legitimate" press agent, is in Boston. He has accepted [illegible] Charles Washburn's play, "All Editions." [illegible] Maney will be paid while the show is rehearsing and will work for nothing while [illegible] the play runs. The author is [illegible] skeptical . . . "All Editions" opens next Monday in New York. The boys may gag it into a hit . . . The [illegible] will get a copy for New York opening night seats. Boston citizens save $8.25 by local residence . . .

Following the Nose:

Schnozzola and Bob Hope made the late spots last night for relaxation. Mike Best, owner of the New York Cotton Club, where Bill Robinson and a super-colored show is grossing $32,000 a week, was with them . . . The party made the Mayfair first, the Theatrical Club later . . . The Nose acknowledged an ovation at the latter place as follows: "I know I'm not good-looking but what is my opinion against thousands of others?" As a breather between encores, The Nose destroyed a piano. Business was very bad all over town. A Monday holiday is ruinous to the following day except in the Yuletide season. Christmas falls on Friday this year, and, if we may be so daring as to make another prediction, New Year's Day will happen on a Friday, too.

FREDDIE BARTHOLOMEW IAN HUNTER PEGGY CONKLIN

Freddie Bartholomew, Ian Hunter and Peggy Conklin shown in a scene from W. S. Van Dyke's production, "The Devil Is a Sissy," which comes to Loew's State and Orpheum on Friday.

'Anthony Adverse' Held For Second Week

"ANTHONY ADVERSE," the Warner Brothers production of the Hervey Allen best-seller, enters its second week at the Paramount and Fenway tomorrow and continues to break attendance records.

Frederic March has the title role with Olivia de Haviland playing opposite him in this fabulous story of a boy born out of wedlock as the result of one of the world's most beautiful love stories.

Billy Mauch enacts the role of Anthony as a boy of 10. His mother is portrayed by beautiful Anita Louise while Edmund Gwenn plays his grandfather. Gale Sondergaard plays the role of the latter's jealous housekeeper. Don Luis is the part assigned to Claude Rains.

March, as the adult Anthony, finds romance and adventure all over the world and the producers have spared neither time nor expense to make of his life a romantic and glamorous saga.

Mervyn LeRoy directed the picture from the screen play by Sheridan Gibney.

Hit Coming To Shubert

"Call It a Day," the first subscription play of the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society in Boston this season, opens Monday at the Shubert Theater for an engagement of two weeks.

This comedy, which has had the distinction of success in London, where it is still running, as well as in New York, stars Gladys Cooper and Philip Merivale and is an amusing account of a day in the well-mannered home-life and adventures abroad of the Hilton family as each member in turn is characteristically affected by the coming of spring.

Radio Audition

On the screen bill at the Gayety, starting tomorrow, will be "I Stand Condemned," with Harry Bauer, well-known European screen star, and "Champagne Charlie."

The special stage feature will be the popular amateur radio audition which offers cash prizes for the three winners.

Another Astaire Film For Ginger Rogers

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Oct. 14—Ginger Rogers' flaming locks were dyed all for naught because now "Mother Carey's Chickens" has been postponed for three months and Ginger goes into "Stepping Toes" with Fred Astaire.

Louella O. Parsons

A little disappointing no doubt for Ginger who really did dye her hair for the part. I saw her dining with Jimmy Stewart and had to look twice to be sure I was seeing right—so greatly does her dark hair alter her appearance. But she'll need the glamorous red tresses for the Astaire picture.

I am told the reason for the switch is due to the fact that there is no other picture ready for Fred and he is far too expensive to be kept without a job.

"Mother Carey's Chickens," which Ginger has looked forward to so eagerly, will be made just the moment "Stepping Toes" is finished. Ginger has tried hard to get away from dancing pictures for a breathing spell, for they are such a drain on her strength and keep her underweight, but fate seems to be agin her!

Apparently Basil Rathbone's villainy continues on the screen, for Samuel Goldwyn telephoned him long distance to play the heavy in "Hurricane." Rathbone, who was one of our most romantic leading men on the stage, has never been given a chance on the screen to do any of his Romeo characterizations.

After he scored as the cruel stepfather in "David Copperfield," his fate was sealed. He was a heavy—and that's all there was to it. Because he has done such a swell job he is much in demand, and if "Hurricane" doesn't go into production until next spring I am wondering if Rathbone won't do another Hollywood picture first.

That big chance Johnny Farrow has been waiting for has been handed him by Warner Brothers. Johnny has always had a yen to direct but never got beyond shorts at MGM. Now he is to megaphone "Men in Exile," a story of men who are wanted by their countries and who seek refuge in the South Seas.

June Travis and Dick Purcell are lined up and if this picture is all Warners' expect, Johnny will go right ahead. Speaking of June Travis, she and Simone Simon were at the airport to bid au revoir to Willie Wyler, but reports are that June lost out to Simone, who wept the loudest at his leaving.

Maybe Robert Ripley should be informed of this one, but Fredric March has just turned down a cool $125,000 one-picture contract to star in "Twenty Years Before the Mast" for Republic. And that isn't all of this believe-it-or-not.

The company offered to contract any director Freddie chose to megaphone the film. It isn't because he didn't want to work for an independent company, but he is signed for so many pictures in advance, that another at this time is an impossibility. Such an ambitious offer is an indication of the plans Republic is making to bolster its product.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CAROLE LOMBARD'S family and about eighteen close friends celebrated her birthday Sunday night. CLARK GABLE'S gift, a sports bracelet in gold and a pedigreed cocker spaniel. Tennis at midnight with ALICE MARBLE wielding a mean racket, and a bridge game with Carole's mother as the star player, kept the party going until the wee, sma' hours; the FRANCHOT TONES anniversaried the same night, with Joan giving her husband of a year an evening watch while he reciprocated with a huge unset sapphire; THYRA SAMTER WINSLOW had everyone at DOROTHY PARKER'S cocktail party in hysterics when she apologized to GLORIA SWANSON because people told her they looked alike; JEAN MUIR and JOHN SANFORD, the writer, a new twosome, first at the cocktail party and later at a night spot.

PRESTON FOSTER, back in town with a four days' growth of beard, all set for his next picture, which requires real whiskers; MARGARET SULLAVAN flying to Hollywood for a brief visit before she opens in her stage play; another week in bed for CLAUDETTE COLBERT before she is able to return to "Maid of Salem"; DORIS KENYON, choosing the concert stage in preference to two movie engagements, leaves for an eight weeks' tour.

The three TALMADGES, NORMA, NATALIE and CONSTANCE, who have been doing New York together, may all return to Hollywood at the same time—that is, unless Connie changes her mind; AILEEN HUDSON (ED SEDGEWICK'S sister) showering for Hollywood's newest arrival, PATRICK SHAUGHAN O'BRIEN, the adopted son of the PAT O'BRIENS. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

PAUPER GRAVE WAITS CHARLESTOWN WIDOW

A sister in Arlington. A brother in Boston. A cousin in the West End.

Yet the body of 77-year-old Mary Scott, a widow, who once lived in Neal court, Charlestown, must go to an unmarked, pauper's grave, unless someone comes forward to give her the last gift anyone can have on earth—a simple funeral and a decent burial.

She is but one of 23 tragic cases, bodies of men and women who lie in the city morgue, unclaimed, apparently forgotten.

Medical Examiner Timothy Leary made his last appeal today to those who might answer. In a few days, otherwise, it must be Potter's Field for these dead.

There are two other women in this sorrowful collection—a woman known as Lena Malcolm, 40, of Sanford place, South End, and one known as Catherine Allen of Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay. Miss Malcolm is thought to have an aunt in Belmont.

Other bodies, some named, some unnamed, some partially identified, are listed as:

Michael Kutonis or Tuane, 42, of Lowell street, West End.

Silas Chase, 65, West Fourth street, South Boston.

Michael Palaton, 43, of Mile road, Dorchester.

James Brown, 55, of Camden street, Roxbury. Believed to have a wife in Bridgeport, Ct.

An unidentified man, 55; five feet eight and one-half inches tall; slight build; grey hair and grey eyes; black eyebrows and lashes.

An unidentified man known as "Roberts," 80, of Shawmut avenue, South End.

Unidentified man; 50; five feet ten inches tall; grey hair and grey eyes.

Unidentified man; 60; five feet five inches tall; 155 pounds; partly bald, with grey hair; false teeth.

Eugene Allen of Rutland square, South End.

Paulino Miolano of Greenough lane, North End.

Thomas Britton of Dwight street, South End.

Vincent Johnson of Albion street, South End.

Thomas Sturgis of Massachusetts avenue, South End.

John Cox of Appleton street, South End.

Earl Schwarz of Shawmut avenue, South End, believed to have a brother living in California.

Edward Roland of Dudley street, Roxbury.

Clarence Carter, a Negro, of Oak place, South End.

Joseph Rudrumias, or Battista, of Bradford street, South End.

Harry Mann of Worcester street, South End.

Arthur Hurd of West Newton street, South End.

Hero Honors to Body From Potter's Field

Some measure of consolation came to an aged Charlestown mother today when she learned that the body of her son, a World War hero, will be accorded full military honors on Saturday when it is moved from a Potter's Field grave to rest in the National Cemetery at Cypress Hills, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary Kelley of Eden street, Charlestown, won't be able to go to the funeral, but two other sons and three daughters will follow the body to the new grave.

Thus will be written a last chapter in the life of Patrick William Kelley, who joined the colors in 1918, then, on his return from war, was "lost" as far as his mother was concerned.

He had died in the Bellevue Hospital, New York, 15 months ago and, because he was known only as "William Kelly," went to the pauper's grave.

The fact that he had failed to apply for his veteran's bonus and that he wasn't carried on the War Department records as dead set wheels in motion that finally identified "William Kelly" of the Bowery as Patrick William Kelley of Charlestown.

Electrolux Is Silent In Operation

The feature of the Electrolux gas refrigerator, which homemakers comment on most frequently, is its absolute silence in operation. This is achieved by an ingenious principle which is a paradox in itself, heat being used to make cold.

A small gas flame is the basis for this unique method of refrigeration. Because there is no machinery and no moving parts there is nothing to make a sound. Its simplicity and freedom from mechanism also reduces wear to a minimum and assures many years of satisfactory service. This is one reason why so many Electrolux refrigerators have been installed in new apartments in Greater Boston.

The exterior beauty of the Electrolux brings a gay delightful touch to the kitchen, while its interior offers practical advantages invaluable to every housewife—such features as ice cube trays that are released by the flip of a trigger; vegetable freshener compartment; a tilt-shelf as well as a removable split shelf; automatic cold control; interior lighting and many others.

Because of its rare good looks, its sturdy construction and its economy of operation, the Electrolux gas refrigerator is one of the most valuable of the many awards to be given away at the American - Advertiser cooking school. The award is made possible through co-operation of the Boston Consolidated Gas Co.

Making Hot Chocolate

This is the method for making hot chocolate with a rich, satisfying flavor; quantity six cups:

Use Bensdorp's Cocoa, 4 heaping teaspoons.

Twelve teaspoons sugar.

Add only enough boiling water to make a paste, and dissolve.

Then add 4 cups of milk and bring to a boil.

To this add 1 cup evaporated, unsweetened milk. Beat with Dover egg-beater before taking from fire. Serve with whipped cream if desired.

Weenies in Popper

Frankfurters may be placed in a corn popper and held over the coals for roasting. In this way three or four can be cooked at one time.

Balanced Diet Needed By Children

With colder weather here, children are bound to spend longer hours indoors. To counteract the lack of exercise and fresh air a diet rich in energy providing elements must be supplied. So the wise mother will choose foods that will yield enough proteins, minerals and vitamins to take care of the needs of strenuous, growing children. A liberal supply of vegetables and fruit, whole grain cereals and breads and a bountiful daily portion of milk are necessary to maintain perfect health.

Here are some suggestions for menus for school children—often the dishes prepared for noon time lunches may be served for the family dinner in the evening. But be sure to serve at least one hot, substantial dish at noon for it refreshes and restores depleted energy.

Italian Spinach
Crisp Bacon
White Bread
Banana Tapioca Cream

ITALIAN SPINACH

1 quart cooked and drained spinach
Salt and pepper
1 cup grated American cheese
14 crackers crumbled fine
1 egg beaten
2 tablespoons water
2 cups hot medium white sauce
2 hard boiled eggs

Mix all ingredients together. Put into greased mold, cover and steam 45 minutes. Unmold on hot platter and serve with 1 cup thick white sauce.

BANANA TAPIOCA CREAM

1-3 cup minute tapioca
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 egg yolk
4 cups milk
1 egg white, stiffly beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 bananas

Combine minute tapioca, sugar, salt, egg yolk and milk in top of double boiler and stir enough to break egg yolk. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white; add to remaining tapioca mixture and blend. Add vanilla and chill—mixture thickens as it cools. Just before serving crush 1 banana with silver fork and dice the other; then fold into tapioca cream.

Creamed Chipped Beef
Baked Potato
Whole Wheat Bread
Orange Gelatin

ORANGE GELATIN

2 tablespoons granulated gelatin
1 cup cold water
Soak 5 minutes
Add:
1 cup orange juice, heated but not boiled
Stir to dissolve gelatin
Add:
1 cup orange juice, not heated
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon grated orange rind
¼ teaspoon salt
Chill in individual molds.

Fruit Cakes Best When Baked Early

If you prepare your holiday fruit cakes now you will be rewarded by a finer, richer cake, whose flavor is a subtle blend of spices, blended over a long period in anticipation of holiday festivities. Here are some recipes for the creation of cakes of outstanding goodness:

FRUIT CAKE

4 cups seedless raisins
2½ cups currants
½ cup candied cherries
1 slice candied pineapple
2 cups citron
½ cup grape juice or brandy
1 cup shortening
1½ cups brown sugar
5 eggs
½ cup each orange marmalade and grape jelly
½ square unsweetened chocolate, melted
2½ cups flour
1½ tsp. baking powder
¼ tsp. each salt, nutmeg, allspice
2 tsp. cinnamon
1½ cups finely chopped almonds
2 cups pecans cut in half

Soak fruit overnight in grape juice or brandy. Cream shortening, add sugar, beat well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly. Add marmalade, jelly and chocolate. Sift half the flour with baking powder, salt and spices, add to first mixture. Sift rest of flour over fruit; add to batter; add nuts. Place in loaf pans lined with well-greased brown paper. Cover tightly, steam slowly 6 hours. Bake in a slow oven about 1 hour. Makes 2 loaf cakes.

THE GAS REFRIGERATOR

① NO MOVING PARTS TO WEAR
② PERMANENTLY SILENT
③ CONTINUED LOW RUNNING COST
④ SAVES ENOUGH TO PAY FOR ITSELF
⑤ MODERN BEAUTY AND CONVENIENCE

Each year, more and more families choose Electrolux, because its different, simpler operating method offers important advantages no other refrigerator can match.

ELECTROLUX brings you the last word in refrigerator beauty and convenience. And it brings you more! Thanks to its basically different operating method, it assures you of greater years of completely efficient, low-cost service. For Electrolux hasn't a single moving part! A tiny gas flame does all the work . . . circulates the simple refrigerant, which freezes ice and produces constant food-preserving cold—without noise, friction or wear. Owners find this modern gas refrigerator actually pays for itself with its savings on food bills, refrigerating cost and depreciation. But get all the facts. Stop in and let us tell you the whole story about this remarkable refrigerator whose popularity is reaching the proportions of a nation-wide trend!

MILLIONS of families are rejoicing! For mother has learned a new cooking secret that's made even her good cooking better. A new way to bake and fry that gives lighter, more delicate cakes—flakier pastry—crisper, tastier fried foods, that are as easy to digest as if baked or boiled. Don't you want to find out all about it? Of course you do! Then be sure to attend this week's home-making demonstration. Admission is absolutely free.

You'll hear all about a new, purer ALL-vegetable shortening called Spry that's whiter, smoother, creamier, stays fresh right on the pantry shelf. No need to keep in the refrigerator. This means that Spry never gets chilled and stiff but is always right for quick, easy creaming. And it's marvelous for frying. No smoke. No odor.

Everywhere Spry is winning women away from old-fashioned shortenings and cooking fats. Find out all about Spry. Come to the free cooking school. Time and place listed at right.

Here's an amazing offer

Imagine, you can try Spry without risking a penny if you act now! Simply do this. Buy a can of Spry from your grocer. Give Spry every test in cakes, pies, biscuits, fried foods. If you don't find Spry the best shortening you ever used, write to Lever Brothers Company, Cambridge, Mass., stating briefly your reasons for not preferring Spry. Send your name and address and the strip of tin that the key takes off when you open the can. You will promptly receive back twice what you paid for Spry. MILK IS MOST ESSENTIAL FOOD

The poet who said, "Chief actor at life's feast," was not thinking of milk, but milk is none the less the chief and most dramatic actor at life's feast. Milk makes up our quarter of the diet of the average American family. It is the most important food from the cradle to the grave. It is the most nearly perfect of all foods. It is the most important source of [illegible] for the American farmer and accounts for more than 20 cents out of every dollar our vast [illegible] people [illegible]. L. Mencken and Prof. Glenn Frank, with their great fertility of mental recourses, would all turn their attention and rest their mighty minds in some solution of the cow's alarming obstinacy."

So runs the prediction of one thinking farmer.

CREOLE SAUCE

(Louisiana)

- 2 strips of bacon
- 1 small chopped onion
- green pepper, finely chopped
- cup sliced mushrooms
- 6 olives
- 1 cups brown sauce
- Seasoning of salt and pepper to taste

[illegible] the fat from the bacon. [illegible] bacon and add the onion and green pepper. Cook for five [illegible]. Add the tomatoes [illegible] and olives. Heat through. Add the brown sauce which is made with one tablespoon of fat [illegible] one tablespoon [illegible] brown in a saucepan, then [illegible]. This sauce [illegible] with shrimp or beef [illegible] the accompaniment [illegible].

OATMEAL SCRAPPLE

(Pennsylvania)

- 3 pounds lean pork
- 1 large bone
- 1 pound oatmeal
- 3 teaspoons onion juice
- 3 teaspoons salt
- 1 teaspoons pepper

Put pork and bone into a large kettle and cover with water. Cook until meat will fall apart. Run meat through a coarse food chopper and return to liquid that has been strained. Stir in oatmeal and season. Cook slowly [illegible] one hour, then pour into [illegible] pans to cool. When ready [illegible] cut in [illegible] slices and [illegible] and brown.

HYDE PARK PUMPKIN PIE

- 1½ cups cooked pumpkin
- ½ cup brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon cinnamon
- ½ teaspoon ginger
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 eggs, separated
- 2 cups rich milk

Mix the pumpkin, brown sugar, [illegible] and milk together. Separate the eggs and beat the yolks [illegible] thick, then beat into the pumpkin mixture. FINAL SONG PRIZE GOES TO CAMBRIDGE

Florence Parker, 73 Martin street, Cambridge, is the winner of the final daily $10 prize in the Landon song contest.

Her entry along with the other winners that have been published daily since the contest started, will be considered for the nation-wide [illegible] of awards. The first [illegible] and the lyric designated for that award will be used as [illegible] song for Alfred M. Landon. There are other prizes of [illegible] and 5 awards of $25 each.

A [illegible] of four persons nationally known in musical and lyrical fields will make the final decision on the [illegible]. The winning contestants will be announced later.

Here is the final daily winner:

—1—
In the fall of 1936 great problems are at stake
We are standing at the crossroads but we know which road to take.
No matter how misleading their politicians talk,
The New Deal on November third is bound to take a walk.
(Refrain)
Save our country before it is too late!
With LANDON as our Captain we can sail the Ship of State!

—2—
We buy our pork from Europe now, our corn's imported, too.
We lost our cotton market and we have no cows to moo.
There is danger of inflation but they hope that we won't cry,
Because the tax is hidden deep in everything we buy.

—3—
The Constitution's threatened and they say it's out of date.
They have fostered class dissension and they sing the hymn of hate.
They spent billions on the alphabet,
to prime the pump, they say.
Like Lord Bountiful, they're generous with the W. P. A.

—4—
My countrymen, please ponder well, and do not be misled
By demagogic demagogues who muddle up the head.
All is not lost, you have a vote!
LANDON KNOX at your gates!
Keep the Supreme Court on the bench! SAVE OUR UNITED STATES!

STUBBORN STAINS
vanish like magic!

I AM THE ENEMY of spots and stains. When I go after them out they go. From laundry, kitchen and bathroom they are banished with an ease and speed that will amaze you. I disinfect and deodorize as you [illegible] economical operation—adding greater hygiene to your housekeeping.

[illegible] Clorox in your regular laundering process removes ordinary stains and dinginess from white and color-fast cottons and linens. In a slightly stronger solution it takes out stubborn stains such as ink, fruit, flower, grass, beverage, medicine, blood—even scorch and mildew.... Clorox also disinfects, deodorizes and removes stains from refrigerators, food containers, drainboards, sinks, bathtubs, basins, toilet bowls, painted and unpainted woodwork, tile, linoleum, sickroom utensils, garbage receptacles.

Like Clorox itself, the Clorox label is a revelation of safer and easier housekeeping. It also lists many important personal uses. Clorox is concentrated for economy. Always order by name. There is only one Clorox.

AUSTEN LAKE

Casey, New Irish Giant, Different Type From Danno

THE NEW IRISH STRONG MAN, Steve Casey, is a different type of Celt than Danno O'Mahony, the blond countryman from Cork who created such a splash in the wrestling industry within these purlieus. Steve is a "dark Irishman" as contrasted with the sandy, Nordic type that O'Mahony represents and he hails from the fishing community of Sneem on the southwest coast, where the mountains and the rocks come down to the sea and the folk set out on three month voyages for hake, cod and herring in 45-foot open boats, built by themselves.

CASEY COMES READY MADE

CASEY TALKED OF HOME, TOO. What native-born Irishman does not. But it was salt talk that came from the chest in a salty rumble. He had wrestled for love of feeling his muscles jerk and he had fished for a living, eating part of his catch and shipping the surplus in ice-cars to Dublin. Where he lived they baked their bread in stone ovens and now and then had a bit of brine meat. He could do a job of smithing at a forge, shoe a horse ("Showa-hars" he said), mend a rush roof or build a rubble wall. You don't hire help in Sneem.

[illegible]

KERRY VS. CORK

THIS HOLD AS STEVE DEMONSTRATED IT on Nasher Stone, Bowser's publicity roundsman, looks less charming to the eye than Danno's stamp-pulling antic which was a picturesque bit of nonsense requiring the victim's consent to make his bones agreeable to the figure. The crowd loved it from the first night when Danno twizzled Ernie Dusek in his inaugural opening at the Garden and kept "Wavin' Ernie" as he is known for his obliging way of conforming to any required shape, spinning like a propeller until his draft was like to blow the hair off the ringside patrons.

STEVE ON DAILY DISPLAY

DANNO IS LURKING AROUND HIS Ballydehob home heath until after Thanksgiving, when he will return to the wrestling wars. Meanwhile Cauliflower College will educate Steve for his career, graduating him by easy stages from the Duseks to the Garibaldis and Strangler Lewis, etc. He will be taught the little tortures, facial expressions and [illegible] business of the American mat, which may cause him some astonishment. But, by the time Danno [illegible] Steve will be a polished [illegible] department, meaning [illegible] Collection of Human Oddities [illegible] to hold the affections of his public.

STEVE CASEY'S
KILLARNEY FLIP

CASEY Tries It on DUSEK

BETTER THAN "IRISH WHIP"

By SAM COHEN

The "Killarney Flip" made an impromptu debut in America last night at Mechanics Building and was even more glamorously accepted than the "Irish Whip" after it all but mangled the junior member of the Dusek family, Wally.

In a match not advertised, Steve Casey, Ireland's newest contribution to American wrestling circles, put on display his "Killarney Flip" before some [illegible] customers who had [illegible] with him throughout the match to knock Dusek loose of his front teeth.

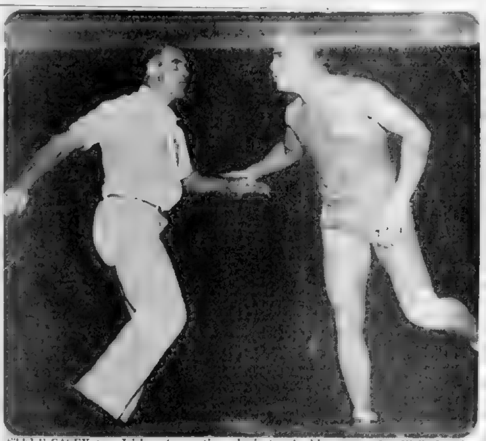
[illegible] referee of [illegible] McCoy, [illegible] a foul that [illegible]

Casey Acts

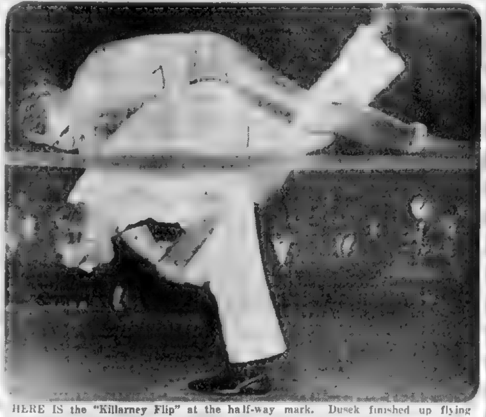
[illegible] that he had seen [illegible] Casey [illegible]

Ireland must be Heaven but the Duseks don't belong there as young Wally was ready to a moment after this fatal swing, for Casey hung him on the hopes with a right fist that completely covered Dusek's features. Then he grabbed Dusek and handed him a "Killarney Flip" that almost wrapped Dusek's spine around his neck.

[illegible]



STEVE CASEY, new Irish mat sensation who just arrived here, goes after Wally Dusek with both hands (and what hands) flying after the latter tossed a punch at him when he was disqualified by Casey for fouling Bibber McCoy at Mechanics Building last night. Casey was guest referee.



HERE IS the "Killarney Flip" at the half-way mark. Dusek finished up flying through the air and Steve Casey picked him up again and spread him on the canvas once more, as the crowd howled.

FIGHTING MAD, here is Casey whaling away at Wally Dusek after flopping him on his back with a "Killarney Flip" in an impromptu match staged at Mechanics Building last night when Dusek attacked Casey, who was referee of the Dusek-McCoy finnish match. Casey had disqualified Dusek for fouling McCoy.

Full Corps of Cadets to Be Here for Game

By Bill Grimes

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 14 "How do you account for that skinny, spindle legged, undernourished looking kid out there standing up under the terrific punishment, he's received in major games for the past two seasons?" I asked Head Coach "Gar" Davidson, after getting my first close up view of Charles "Monkey" Mayer, the "ace" back of the Army.

Bill Grimes

"Well, to be perfectly frank with you" Davidson replied "I don't know how he does it. All I know is that he loves football and it may be that his ardor for the game is so strong as to nullify his weekly beatings."

"Did you notice that "Monkey" was the first cadet on the field this afternoon" commented Coach Davidson, "well that's [illegible] old story now. He's always the first to report. And, incidentally, I might add he's the last to get back to the gym.

"'Monk' was pretty well shot after the Columbia game, during which, by the way, 11 of the 15 passes he threw were completed and I ordered him not to report in 'full pack' until tomorrow. I saw him run through the auto tires, when he came on the field and then go over and take a few shots at the dummies, despite the fact that he's togged out in a sweat suit, and, minus pads. He practiced kicking for about 20 minutes and now he's out there passing with Jimmy Craig."

"What's his actual weight?" was my next query. I see that the public relations office data has him listed at 147, but, in my judgment, he does not come within pounds of reaching those figures."

"When he returned to duty late this summer, 'Monk' weighed 147" was as close as Coach Davidson would come to committing himself, on his ace's poundage.

Maxie [illegible]

Raps Louis

He calls Joe Louis a palooka, a fellow who can't hit worth a dime, he lashes those who say he quit in his previous fight with the colored bomber and gives medical authorities to prove his assertions that two or three bones in his punching hand were broken, he calls Jimmy Braddock a fine, clean living fellow but an old man too feeble to hold the title, he tells that he is now making more money than the champion and that he's selling suits as fast as they come up.

[illegible]

Why I bet on Schmeling to beat Louis. I had 100 smackers on the German at odds of [illegible]. So Louis can't be any great fighter when an old man like Schmeling can drop him.

"They took actual count of the number of punches Louis hit me. There were just 270 in all. I can't see where the colored fellow can have any reach punch when he had to go that long against me when I had nothing to hit him back with. He couldn't even carry Dempsey's shoes into the ring.

I never should have gone in the ring that night. I had been up in the mountains chopping wood for two months trying to strengthen my hand. The bones were broken. I had been to Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. They told me I would have to rest it and toughen it gradually. I couldn't even use the punching bag.

[illegible]

Praises Wife

"I've got the swellest girl in the world," he tells us. "And it's one marriage which is going to stick, despite all the cracks made at me. She's for me, rich or broke, champion or not. She's far too good for the likes of me and I know I'm darn lucky to have found a girl like her.

"I've seen and known lots of women, blondes, redheads, brunettes and all of the others. But there are none like her. My folks are crazy over her. They love her as much as they do me. She's a girl just like my mother and yours. No one can ever point a finger at her. She's straight to the core.

Why Ethel would scrub floors for me if it was necessary. She won't even use my charge accounts. I have just this minute finished writing to her and I told her I wanted to be a regular fellow if for no other reason than on her account."

But Maxie [illegible]

"I won't say yes. And I won't say no. But I'm telling the world over that if it's yes there won't be any holding me. How I would love it to be true.

And if it is true then Mr. Jack Dempsey had better look to his laurels. He's getting pretty cocky over that newest kid of his. But the old Manassa Mauler will see a real father when and IF."

Terriers Perfect Attack

By MURRAY KRAMER

This is offensive week as Boston University works [illegible] preparing for its Fenway Park debut against Washington [illegible] of St. Louis next Saturday afternoon.

There will be very little time spent on defense drills [illegible] fact that the [illegible] use the Notre Dame system and since the Terriers spent most of last week preparing against the same type of offense, it [illegible] to affect this phase of the game can be minimized.

It will be offensive work every afternoon with no scrimmage or contact work of any [illegible] for the Terriers cannot take the chance of losing a single man.

As the situation stands now, [illegible] Fanigetti is home ill with the grippe and has one understudy. Russ Lawry is out with a [illegible] muscle [illegible] first string [illegible] with a [illegible] and may not be [illegible] Saturday.

Lynch is the only end on the squad with more than one year of experience [illegible] in the spark plug of the club. If these two [illegible] are unable to play Saturday the Terriers chances of upsetting the favored Washington U. Bears will be [illegible].

A [illegible] back last year [illegible] in place of Lynch [illegible]

It is largely because of the Crompton shift that [illegible] devoting so much time to offense this week beside the fact that [illegible]

[illegible] He Watts [illegible]

He is the pivot man on [illegible] to pass and keep in order to be a [illegible] threat.

LEWIS HANEY ON PROSPERITY

Roosevelt Speeches
IMPLY U. S. NEVER SAW Good Times Before

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Oct. 14—The President's recent campaign speeches show that he is resorting to the old Republican dodge of claiming all prosperity as the direct result of his policies. He has even referred to the stock market and to corporate profits.

One would think that we had never had any prosperity before.

Whether this old game of the party in power will work again, I do not know. At least there are several considerations which suggest it is not sure-fire stuff this time.

First, any real prosperity tends to make those who have benefited by it conservative. They want to keep what they have. This has worked out all right under Republican leadership.

But Roosevelt is a New Dealer and that means radicalism. It means that he is likely to take away the prosperity of those who prosper, by further devaluation of money, or discriminatory taxes, or wasteful government experiments.

Those of use who have any of this "prosperity" will want to hang onto it. We will figure the chances better under Landon.

Second, the same claims to be the source of prosperity, when made in the past by Republicans, have at least not had the following drawbacks: (1) A record public debt and a continuous government deficit; (2) some 20,000,000 people on government relief; (3) an army of Works Progress Administration workers, mostly doing things which bring in no revenue.

In short, our present "prosperity" is far more heavily mortgaged than ever before.

Roosevelt's radicalism is illustrated by his Denver talk. He said that in 1933 there was only one agency capable of starting things going again, namely the federal government. This means that centralized government control is his favored agency.

That is exactly what Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin believe.

How different from the spirit of individual initiative and self-reliance which brought most of us to America and made America what she is!

After all, Roosevelt is just an individual. He went into politics after failing to make a success as a corporation president.

Why should we expect his individual initiative to be any better in running all businesses in this country, than the initiative of the successful business men who run the numerous individual businesses?

And when he talks of the lack of resources on the part of cities and states, and claims that the federal government has the resources, what does he mean?

What does the government have that it doesn't take away from us citizens of cities and states?

If the people of a city or a state will not vote to waste their own money on boondoggling "work relief" projects in their own areas, how does their federal government get away with it?

The simple truth is that by taking the control to Washington, Roosevelt takes it away from the people. We can no longer see or understand what he is doing.

Billions are too much for us to count. The Tennessee valley authority and 'Quoddy are too far away from us to see.

He says he followed two "simple" lines of action; (1) "spending money to put people to work" (2) "lending money to stop people from going broke."

But whose money has he been spending and lending? How did he get it? What sort of "work" are those who got it doing? How can he keep the people from going broke when he makes their government go broke? Aren't the people the government any more?

The long and short of it is that Roosevelt and his crew think of themselves as being different from and above "the people." They are "the government," and they think that in that capacity they can first borrow and tax money away from the rest of us, and then deal it back to us in doles.

This is the old army game.

It is working fine for the generals, colonels, lieutenants, etc. What about us privates?

COTTON CONSUMPTION
Increase Shown in September

Washington, Oct. 14 (AP)—Cotton consumed during September was reported by the Census Bureau today to have totaled 629,727 bales of lint and 67,859 of linters, compared with 574,289 and 65,382 in August this year, and 450,647 and 61,362 in September last year.

Cotton on hand September 30 was reported held as follows:

In consuming establishments 848,734 bales of lint and 132,264 of linters, compared with 752,219 and 153,062 on August 31 this year, and 723,427 and 143,958 on September 30 last year.

In public storage and at compresses 6,805,999 bales of lint and 31,852 of linters, compared with 4,336,219 and 29,693 on August 31 this year, and 7,142,778 and 28,628 on September 30 last year.

September imports totalled 9162 bales, compared with 12,671 in August this year, and 6374 in September last year.

Exports in September totaled 569,624 bales of lint and 12,801 of linters, compared with 182,487 and 10,585 in August this year, and 456,764 and 14,579 in September last year.

Cotton spindles active during September numbered 23,514,270, compared with 23,433,658 in August this year, and 22,681,776 in September last year.

MOVES
To Spread
TVA
ACCORDING TO PWA RECORDS

Washington, Oct. 14 (INS)—Moves to spread distribution of TVA power to practically all large cities in the southeastern states except Nashville, Tenn., are under way, according to PWA records, despite the "truce" agreements between TVA officials and private power companies.

This truce, under which a contract of the Commonwealth and Southern power interests, expiring November 3, was extended for three months pending further discussions of a proposed "pooling" of federal and private power rights, called for no new activities by either government or private interests in that time.

PWA, however, has made a grant of $3,092,000 to Memphis for a municipal distribution system, using TVA power, and work is under way on construction of two transmission lines to that city.

The Electric Bond and Share subsidiary which supplies Memphis with power has obtained an injunction restraining PWA from turning over any of the fund to Memphis. The company also is seeking to enjoin the city from using its own funds, raised through a bond issue, on the project.

PWA Administrator Ickes said that grants for municipal plants and distribution systems in the TVA territory "will take their natural course," indicating that they will receive consideration regardless of the TVA-power interest truce.

EXPORT COPPER
Price Higher

New York, Oct. 14 (AP)—Heavy European buying today sent the price of export copper to 9.97½ cents a pound, the highest level since April, 1931, when transactions were recorded at 10.05 cents.

Some observers attributed heavy European purchases to increased requirements for armaments. On the London metal exchange the asking price for electrolytic copper reached the equivalent of 10 cents, also a five-year record.

Domestic prices were unchanged at 9.75 cents.

Wall Street Hears

New York, Oct. 14 (INS)—That Inland Steel should net close to $8.50 a share for 1936, against $6.54 last year.

That full-year production of Anaconda Copper will approximate 550,000,000 pounds, compared with 517,000,000 in 1935.

That American Safety Razor may vote a small extra dividend before the end of the year.

LABOR Relations VIEWED
RESPONSIBILITY OF EMPLOYER

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service.)

Los Angeles, Oct. 14—Instead of marking time waiting for an overt act, such as a waterfront strike, to bring on industrial warfare, the more farseeing Pacific coast employers are seeking quietly and unostentatiously to improve their own relations with their men.

More intelligent employers recognize that elimination of genuine grievances voluntarily is the greatest assurance against strife. On the other hand, continuance of abuses merely places fat on the fire for the benefit of agitators.

One of the largest employers of men on the Pacific coast, chatting privately with me, said that improving industrial relationships on the part of large corporations in the last 15 years created an immense social reserve of stability. He urged fellow employers to take a dynamic view of this need, and to strive continuously to create the basis for happy working conditions.

"The great need," this executive said, "is to take labor relations out of the hands of subordinate personnel men, who without real qualifications seek to please the boss by holding workers down, and put the responsibility where it belongs on the chief executive.

"No matter nowadays is more vital to the business. We must recognize the legitimacy of collective bargaining, though I personally prefer to bargain with my own men than with outsiders. Secondly, we employers must have an alert wage policy, always promptly paying all that is justified by competitive conditions. When living costs rise, we should be prompt to the need for higher wages.

"Though I believe that high wages are desirable, merely paying a little above the market is not enough in industrial relations. All the policies, touching on relations between management and men, must be right. I think employers should have competent outside audits of their industrial relationships made periodically."

Recognizing the interdependence of business, there has been some suggestion of a united front by major employers. However, without the unifying effect of a major strike, there is a disposition to handle these matters individually, rather than collectively. Yet in all the thinking by industrialists on the Pacific Coast, labor matters are uppermost in their minds.

There is a widespread belief by employers out here that the Roosevelt administration has been exercising its influence to defer pending labor troubles until after the election.

STEEL PRODUCTION LOWER
Rail Equipment Buying Gains

New York, Oct. 14 (AP) — The aggregate amount of steel buying in the first part of October is equal to that of the corresponding period in September, though there has been a falling off in items that were advanced in price for the fourth quarter, "Iron Age" says today in its weekly review.

"In sheets and bars some mills have practically all the tonnage on their books they can furnish in this quarter," the trade journal says. "As evidence that sheets are going rapidly into consumption, some customers have requested earlier deliveries than were originally specified. With automobile companies swinging into larger production schedules, consumption of sheets will be materially increased during the next month.

"Railroad equipment buying is gaining headway, as steadily increasing carloadings point to the necessity of rehabilitation of rolling stock and motive power."

A larger supply of scrap has eased the tension that has steadily increased prices since June. Heavy melting steel is down 25 cents a ton at Pittsburgh, resulting in a decline of 8 cents a ton in the "Iron Age" composite price of $16.67.

The review placed current steel production at 75 per cent of capacity, one-half point lower than last week.

Electric Power Index Off

New York, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Associated Press index of electric power production, with 1929-1930 taken as 100, declined for the week ended October 10 to 117.1 from 117.3 the previous week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 101.6.

The range for recent years follows:

	1936	1935	1934	1933
High	117.7	105.5	97.4	91.9
Low	102.0	94.1	91.9	80.2

Actual production, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, was 2,168,487,000 kilowatt hours, a decline of .1 of 1 per cent from 2,169,442,000 kilowatt hours last week, but an increase of 16.1 per cent over the 1,867,127,000 kilowatt hours reported last year.

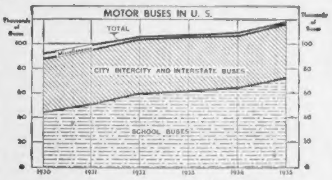
25 Years Ago

New York, Oct. 14 (INS)—Revised estimates put cotton crop above 15,000,000 bales.

Copper stocks increased 7,453,355 pounds in September.

Coal road shares slumped on rate protests to Interstate Commerce commission.

Motor Buses Increase in 1935



In 1935 there were 117,850 motor buses in the United States. This compares with 108,130 in 1934 and 91,800 in 1930. Since 1930 the total number of buses in the country have increased every year.

Of all the buses in the country last year 71,850, or over 60 per cent, were school buses. These buses are of the non-revenue type and are principally supported by local taxes.

City buses are largely replacing the old trolley cars and have increased from 13,350 in 1930 to 19,250 in 1935.

Interstate bus lines now provide transportation practically to every section of the country. The growing popularity of this mode of travel is evidenced from the fact that interstate buses have increased from about 5000 in 1930 to nearly 10,000 in 1935.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, Oct. 14—Rumors that two major automobile manufacturers were casting longing glances at the Hercules Motor diesel engine stirred some activity in the stock.

Several days ago the reports stated Chrysler after testing the moter in its new Dodge trucks was ready to enter into a deal with Hercules. Although never officially denied, quarters closest to Chrysler doubted such a step was contemplated. Now the story credits General Motors with a similar motive but representatives of the latter company yesterday gave it little credence. General Motors already operates two diesel engine plants, one at Cleveland and another at Chicago.

Colgate-Palmolive Inventory Profits

Recent broadening speculative interest in Colgate-Palmolive-Peet partially results from reports that the company contracted for its raw material requirements at lower prices early this year, when fats and oils were declining sharply. Inasmuch as soap buyers hold off orders during periods of unsettled prices for ingredients used in manufacturing the finished product, Colgate reported a deficit equal to 19 cents for the common the first six months of 1936. During the current half year raw material prices have been strengthening and the company's operations have improved in consequence. As a matter of fact it recently raised prices for certain goods.

Minor Changes in Lehman Portfolio

Break-down of Lehman Corp. common stock holdings as of September 30, compared with three months ago, indicates little shifting in portfolio positions during the last quarter. The report lists the total investment in the various groups without giving the positions in individual issues. A slight reduction appears in share holdings of agricultural machinery concerns, automobile and rubber, building and construction, cans and container manufacturing, electrical equipment, and steel, compared with the end of June. Higher ratios to total assets than three months ago were shown for merchandising, metals and mining, office appliance, oils, public utilities, railroads, and railroad equipment. In the case of steel stocks, the ratio to total assets at market value September 30 was 1.9 per cent, compared with 3.85 per cent the end of the second quarter.

Currency Pact Outcome Discussed

Although surrounded with a great aura of optimism, the three-way currency agreement recently reached is not an end in itself. The pact, of course, was aimed at steadying France during her trying transition period to the lower-value franc. A visitor to Wall Street, a man close to the British government philosophy, admitted that "no one can really tell whether France has been saved at this time." The British government moved out of its previous antipathy to currency pacts only by reason of its recognition of the seriousness of the French crisis. It remains to be seen, this visitor admitted, whether the devalued francs can overcome the widespread difficulties which confront the French government. Upon the outcome may depend the prospect for early general war in Europe.

SECURITIES

Main REASON FOR Advance

By B. C. FORBES

One definite impression gathered during my travels in the East, Middle West and South, is that national appetite for radical Socialistic, anti-business action by the New Deal has been satiated.

This development of sentiment probably accounts for President Roosevelt's recent overtures to utility leaders affected by threatening governmental competition in the Tennessee Valley Authority's far-flung area, for the muzzling of such rabid brain trusters as Professor Tugwell, for complete New Deal silence on former threatening against the Supreme Court, and for the President's anxiety to placate investors

While this country was in the throes of depression and distress the people lent ready ear to all stripes of revolutionaries, all stripes of politicians favoring punishing the thrifty in order to reward the thriftless, all stripes of wealth-sharers, all stripes of worshipers of autocratic forms of government established in various foreign countries, all stripes of advocates of turning America into something un-American.

Students of economic history expected just such eruptions.

But students of economics also know that, as conditions mend, wild-eyed politicians and un-Democratic panaceas lose their hold on sane citizens.

That is now happening here.

One reason corporate securities have been advancing to new heights since their depression debacle is that the conviction is spreading that, even should President Roosevelt be re-elected, he will face a less submissive Congress and a less submissive public, that he will encounter effective opposition should he again seek to arrogate to himself autocratic authority never before yielded to any American chief executive.

One question put to me everywhere I go is: "What will happen to securities should President Roosevelt win?"

No mortal can ever foretell with certainty what Wall Street will do. One can only guess. In my humble opinion, a Landon victory would bring pronounced immediate betterment in securities and subsequent extraordinary betterment in business and employment. Whether endorsement of President Roosevelt on November 3 would violently upset the stock market temporarily is unpredictable. But at least it is not an impossibility.

As for business, I feel that recovery cannot be and will not be fatally thwarted regardless of any political development now within sight.

How a corporation can be blamed for something for which it isn't responsible:

I was in a railway dining car at the rush hour when a gang of six manacled convicts were led in by a loud, blustering fellow and two aides. The prisoners were an unprepossessing-looking lot. They were seated at two widely-separated tables, four in charge of a frail, old man, two with the blusterer and a subordinate.

To the amazement of the passengers, particularly the unescorted ladies, the keepers promptly removed all the handcuffs, allowing the convicts full command of the table knives and forks.

Four sat next to me—with only the old man, without any gun in hand, watching them. After being asked which dinner courses they preferred, the prisoners talked freely. They were headed for Atlanta. One, complaining that he didn't deserve "three years," intimated that he would "get" a certain policeman (in Indianapolis, I gathered).

Passengers were indignant, the women alarmed. Later they condemned the railroad company for permitting such an "outrage." (There was a waiting list at the dining car doors while the convicts and their keepers went through the ample bill of fare.)

I made inquiries of a railway official who happened to be on board. He agreed that the whole proceeding was scandalous, told me the federal functionaries in charge of the convicts had been asked either to have the meal served in the car they occupied or to dine after the rush hour, but had gruffly demanded to be served at once in the dining car. The dining steward didn't dare refuse "a federal sheriff."

Surely Attorney-General Cummings should stop this disgraceful procedure—it occurs periodically, the railway officials said. The company is helpless, yet is held solely to blame by disgusted patrons.

Is it fair to railway companies to be subjected to condemnation undeservedly?

UNITED FRUIT

Earnings FOR 9 MONTHS Increase

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

The comptroller's estimate of earnings for the United Fruit Co. for the nine months ended September 30 indicate an increase of better than a dollar a share over 1935 results.

While such estimates are naturally subject to adjustment at the year end when final costs are determined they have in the past proved to be a reliable gauge of the big Boston concern's earning power.

The comparative figures for the 1936 and 1935 periods, respectively, are $10,628,000 and [illegible] and are before provision for income taxes. On a per share basis, this is equal to $5.65 for this year and $2.52 last year. A comparison of statements indicates net before taxes for the respective third quarters resulted in earnings of $1.29 per share this year and 66 cents in 1935.

The rise of electric power production to new all time peaks has created a problem in plant expansion which will mean a great deal to dependent equipment companies. However, we feel that the industry that will really gain from an electrical utility expansion program is copper mining and fabrication. At present the outlook is for an increase in copper production that will prevent a shrinkage of supplies and an increase in price. But if sales increase for the reasons noted, or any other demand factor, the price of red metal could easily climb to 10 cents a pound. Obviously current trends favor copper companies and we reiterate our faith in investing where trends are undeniably upward.

Notebook: Speaking of copper reminds us that our favored American Smelting is benefiting from higher production . . . It's chief domestic customers are among the leading units, and this means the company's smelting operations are stimulated . . . And, further than that, the Mexican trouble seems settled for good . . . And elimination of dividend arrears on Revere Copper will be of substantial benefit . . . Last week we wrote here of Atchison's odd chart behavior . . . The time for a break out of the range then noted is close at hand . . . The stock has literally been wound up in spring fashion . . . And, once released, will travel far and fast . . . If on the upside, we would switch other rails into it.

The market picture is still bright. Even the steel picture changed for the better. The order situation, according to reports, is really impressive and points to a diminution of the supply factor. An upswing as broad and persistent as this one has been will bring reactions. But it is not our intention to try and guess when and where they will take place. Rather will we cling to all long stock and when opportunities to buy on dips are presented accept them. The time element as related to accumulation preceding the rise is still favorable and the will to sell by large holders has yet to make an appearance.

Ticker Ticks: Anaconda Wire & Cable business is said to be picking up sharply . . . A large extra seems sure before the year is out . . . Current estimates place Interstate Department full year earnings at about $3 per share . . . The position of Southern Railway has improved greatly during the past year . . . Working capital, cash on hand and earnings are all much improved . . . While obligations to be met are sharply lower . . . Anaconda touched the critical 42 mark noted last week . . . And now is a purchase on dips according to our ideas . . . For an ultimate rally to just under 50.

STOCK MARKET

Prices RESUME Advance

New York, Oct. 14—Led by American Telephone, Western Union, Santa Fe and other bellwethers, the stock market pushed aside profit taking today and resumed its advancing stride.

Selling carried over from yesterday's session and was fairly well distributed before noon. Trading turned inactive on the declining trend, however, and buyers later appeared for many of the depressed leaders. The pace was a little brisker near the fourth hour.

General business and industrial developments were deemed satisfactory by brokerage circles and European affairs were not too disturbing marketwise.

Bonds just about held their own, although rail loans were a bit ahead. Commodities pointed upward and foreign currencies moved indifferently.

The major telephone stock recorded a new five-year top with a gain of more than a point. J. I. Case got up about 4 and Santa Fe 2. Advances of a point or so were shown by Western Union, Great Northern, M-K-T preferred, Kelvinator, Atlantic Gulf & West Indies, Hercules Motors and Budd Manufacturing.

Unchanged to a shade higher were Westinghouse, du Pont, Goodyear, U. S. Rubber, Baldwin Locomotive, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific, Anaconda, Kennecott, Douglas Aircraft, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Standard Oil of New Jersey.

In the backward division were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Loew's, Woolworth, Spiegel-May-Stern, Deere and Consolidated Edison.

A boost in the price of export copper to 9.97½ cents a pound, a peak since 1931, failed to stimulate copper shares to any noticable extent.

Helpful to both the steels and rails was the mid-week review of "Iron Age."

Some mills, it was said, have practically all the sheet and bar tonnage on their books they can furnish in the current quarter. Railroad equipment buying, it was added, is gaining headway as steadily increasing carloadings point to the necessity of rehabilitating rolling stock and motive power.

Holders of the utilities noted the report of the Edison Electric Institute disclosing a slight decline in power production for the week ended October 10. Total output, however, was 16.1 per cent ahead of the corresponding week last year.

TO ADDRESS Advertisers

Guest speaker at the dinner and meeting of the Financial Advertisers' Association will be James J. Caffrey, regional administrator of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The meeting will be held in the Boston Chamber of Commerce on Thursday evening, Oct. 15. Mr. Caffrey's subject will be Financial Advertising and Publicity under the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The subject will be of prime interest to the entire financial fraternity. Mark Hanna of the Bankette Co., newly elected president of the New England group, will preside. Henry I. Hewitt of J. & W. Seligman & Co. is secretary.

—VOTE AMERICAN—

Evans Products Co.

Formal inauguration in Massachusetts of the Evans "Auto-Stop," grade crossing protective device of the Evans Products Co., will take place tomorrow at 3 p. m., when a private demonstration of the installation recently completed at Wayland will be held. The Boston & Maine Railroad has offered a special train for the demonstration.

Register Today!

TODAY is the final day for voters in Boston to make themselves eligible to vote in the presidential election November 3.

Citizens will be registered until 10 p. m. at the office of the Municipal Election Commission and between 6 p. m. and 10 p. m. at the various booths in the 22 wards of the city.

Every qualified citizen should register.

To play the part in this important election that every citizen is not only ENTITLED to play, but is REQUIRED to play as a matter of GOOD CITIZENSHIP, proper registration IS A DUTY that must not under any circumstances be neglected.

The decisions of November 3 will be fateful decisions. They will affect every business, every home, every job, every life.

They must be RIGHT decisions.

And to be right they must be rendered by ALL THE PEOPLE, each guided by conscientious judgment of what is good for the state, good for the country and good for himself.

Reds Plot to Use C. I. O.

THE charge that the Communist Party hopes to gain power in the United States through the Committee for Industrial Organization was made by President John P. Frey of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor at a machinists' convention in Milwaukee.

Stressing the fact that John L. Lewis, sponsor of the committee, has had strong support in the Communist press, Mr. Frey said:

"On orders from Moscow, the Communists are advocating the Committee for Industrial Organization set-up as a step toward the United Front which has caused discord in France and Spain."

The Lewis committee, in splitting organized labor in the United States into warring groups, has accomplished what the Communist Party has been unsuccessfully trying to do for years.

The Communist leaders, therefore, combine admiration for the commitee with determination to make it serve their ends.

If the effort succeeds, there will be no such thing in America as organized labor.

Government By Spite

MEN and women making small incomes, just enough to live on, are to be given a taste of Communist Russia's system of harassing the middle class.

In Washington, some 2000 "workers" who have been resting themselves will investigate 2,687,768 individuals on whom as little as ONE CENT may possibly be imposed as a special assessment.

The investigators have been ORDERED to concentrate on the "small fellow" and to levy an extra assessment whenever possible.

That is the Russian system at its worst, the continued harassment, official nose-poking and annoyance by which the government keeps its citizens under its thumb.

It is NOT the AMERICAN system of the past. And, whatever it may be NOW, it will not be the American system of the FUTURE.

She Doesn't "Give a Hoot"

([illegible])

The picture shows Countess Haugwitz-Reventlow—you knew of her as Barbara Hutton. In her arms is her baby son, heir to one of Denmark's older titles.

Often you've heard about Countess Barbara—in newspapers, magazines, on the radio. Others have had their say.

Now, in the current issue of Cosmopolitan Magazine, Countess Barbara has HER say. She is entitled to be heard, because this young woman, with all her millions, feels that she has been misjudged.

> "I'd like to bring my son up so that it won't make any difference whether he has money or not," she tells you. "I'm under no illusions. I don't give a hoot for social position, and I know that if we didn't have all this money we wouldn't be in the Social Register.
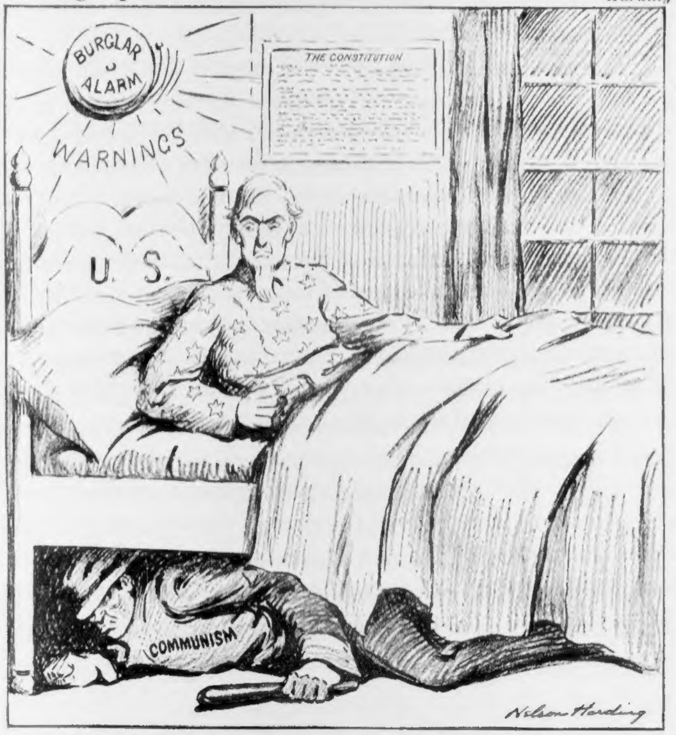
> "After all, I am only one generation removed from the women of my family who washed their own dishes and made their own clothes."

Read the rest of her story in Cosmopolitan Magazine and decide for yourself if Countess Barbara has been misjudged.

Waking Up!

By Nelson Harding



Yes, Uncle Sam is waking up
From his too-lengthy sleep.
Still half awake, but now aware
Of stealthy foes that creep

With plans of deadly violence
And lurk beneath the bed;
While loudly the alarm proclaims
The presence of the Red!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 14 — Tracking down lost manuscripts seems a prosaic pursuit. Yet it consumes men of great brilliance and often sends them to unheard-of corners of the world. Sometimes to face death. Manuscripts have a way of bobbing up in unexpected places after hope is abandoned.

O. O. McIntyre

A New York publishing house is shortly to issue a first edition of Boswell, Dr. Johnson's biographer. It is a "Journal of a Voyage to the Hebrides," complete and not the present well-known fragment. It was a part of the Malahide papers found recently in a croquet set box at Malahide Castle, Scotland.

Then there was Hugh Walpole's discovery of the lost diaries of Sir Walter Scott in a bookshop in San Francisco. And as strange is news the long-searched-for papers of Father Kino, the Jesuit explorer on the Pacific coast, have been sold for an immense sum to the University of California.

The sale was effected through Jake Zeitlin, the Los Angeles book dealer. Zeitlin, dark, wiry, athletic, is the Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach of the West, a former cowboy and authority on Mexicana. The search for the Kino manuscript, forgotten for centuries, ran through Mexico, Spain and England and for three years it had lain in Zeitlin's safe.

I used to remember him, a venerable, blue-bloused chasseur, with an Ole Bill moustache, hailing taxis and running inglorious errands for patrons of the Opera Comique and Poccardi's mirrored cafe across the way. One remembers because he was so sweepingly magnificent in bowing and murmuring mercis for tips. On a bench along an upper Broadway mall the other day I spotted him, sunning himself with two ginghamy rose-buds; grandchildren, one presumed. Passing I smiled and said: "Paree—Opera Comique!" He replied with one of those overdone Willie Howard shrugs: "Paree—Jamais plus! Paree est mort!"

Add word coinage: Strickland Gillilan, in speaking of a recent accolade he received in print, concludes: "And now all the scholaud boys will be coming along with a 'Me too!'" Echoland is by the way of being a honey.

I noticed the long-established Virginia Pope bird hospital is now located in my old neighborhood in West 72d street. For many years it has applied splints to broken legs and wings of canaries, love birds and the like and treated various ailments of cockatoos, parrots and such. Now and then some Good Samaritan finds a sparrow that fell along the streets and carries it to Miss Pope's to be hospitalized and for which he gladly pays the fee.

There's a strange understanding among birds for those with distinctive tenderness for them, as members of Audobon societies well know. Birds will sight a feeder in the parks—as the gull sights a liner at sea before binoculars do—and flock out to meet him or her.

I am told that when the original Miss Pope went into the public squares or parks the birds somehow singled her out and bobbobbed along in her wake. Clemenceau loved birds, and strange specimens, including a crow with one white wing, came to nest at his exile.

Leonard Merrick was a magnet for strange pigeons that came up to him without fear.

In cub reporter days I lived in a seamen's water front rooming house where a poll parrot was greatly beloved by the landlady. It squawked the rest of us $2.50 a week lodgers out of our beauty sleep, but we somehow grew fond of it. The bird's end was tragedy with a Poesque touch. It followed the landlady around on her household chores, and one evening, in letting down a folding bed, she stepped backward on her pet. There was an almost human scream and the bird shrieked: "Poor Polly is dying!" And Polly was, with a broken neck.

Bird dealers say that scare several years ago over a disease scientists say is spread by the poll parrot has almost completely stopped the sale of them. And there are some bird shops that do not have them on hand.

One of my Scotch grandfather's stock stories concerned an escaped parrot that was up in a tree near his home. An Irishman, having never seen a parrot and admiring it as a strangely plumbed bird, climbed up to see if he could catch it. As he neared, the parrot squawked: "Go chase yourself!" And the Irishman, lifting his cap, backed away with: "I'm sorry. Bejabers, I thought you were a burr-rd!"

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

She signs herself "Puzzled"—and thinks her problems unique. But here's betting that you'll feel she has stolen your own private grouch!

Elsie Robinson

"What should I do?" she sighs, "when suddenly, without any sensible reason, I turn against everybody? When I don't care whose feelings I hurt or what anyone thinks. . . . don't give a darn whether people like me or not . . . when, in short, humanity gets under my skin?

"Should I go on smiling, pretending I love and respect people whom I inwardly loathe—or follow my feelings and hit out?

"I know such a feeling is supposed to be degrading. Perhaps you have never felt it. But I'm sure there are thousands like me who periodically despise the whole human race. What's the cure? "PUZZLED."

There is no cure, "Puzzled." Nor is any needed. Such interludes are just a part of life—as inevitable as the passing of the seasons. The soul has its seasons as well as the soil—and this sudden cooling toward humanity, this bored withdrawal, is part of its natural rhythm.

WE MUST REST

It's as foolish to expect our emotions to be always at boiling heat as it would be to expect the year to stay always at spring, or the tide to stay always at flood. Feelings must rest as well as flesh . . . must relax their tension . . . know the deep refreshment of complete indifference.

You don't really "hate" or "despise" people at such times. Your emotions are simply taking a natural and much needed vacation. You are withdrawing into yourself . . . resting and renewing yourself. And it's quite as necessary to do that as it is to go out to the Other Fellow. There are times when we can and should give. There are times when we should lay off!

Have you seen the fallow fields waiting, brown and still, between their seed times and harvest? Every farmer knows that the soil needs rest . . . needs to stop giving . . . needs to be still while its secret vigor accumulates again.

What misery we feverish moderns would save ourselves if we had as much sense as the farmer! Instead, we try to keep life "on high" every second . . . expect a constant flow of enthusiasm, interest, excitement, fury, loyalty and love. When this fails, as it inevitably must, we're horrified.

We wonder if love has ceased—if we're really capable of loving, at all, or are doomed to wander, solitary, through our lives. Or—perhaps we've chosen the wrong mate. If we'd married some one else . . . chosen some other friend or working partner—? ? ?

THE TRUE FRIEND

What idiots we are! Fretting ourselves into a froth over nothing!

Accept yourself as you are, "Puzzled." Take people as, and when, they come . . . and let them go when the contact moment has passed. Make the most of your peak moments of love and interest, enthusiasm and fine fury . . . then be equally grateful for the relaxation of wholesome indifference.

But suppose people misunderstood your indifference . . . feel hurt . . . get angry?

Then let 'em! If they insist upon demanding the impossible and pulling a tantrum because they can't get it—that's their bad luck. The true pal is the one who's willing for you to forget him—when your emotions need a rest.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

A girl will go a long way to win a man's love, when she might have won it right at the start just by taking a step backward.

Married men make the best witnesses, probably because they've been cross-examined so often that they have all the answers ready before they hear the questions.

When a man's thoughts begin to wander away from a woman, nothing but a miracle can keep his feet from just naturally following suit.

The fear of the law can keep almost any average husband from being really bad; but being a genuinely good husband must be his own idea.

The average wife is always ready to forgive and forget—but she never let's her husband forget that she forgave.

Sometimes it is better to have loved and lost, says the Cynic, than to have married and started buying the car, the radio and the furniture on the instalment plan.

Many a wife, who congratulates herself that she is not a lonely spinster, has moments when she secretly wonders if she would look more interesting in widow's weeds.

When a man's wife and his "Sweetie" are the same woman, he has no fear of heart-balm suits or the gossip columns.

King Solomon, with a thousand heart-interests, did not really appreciate "woman's infinite variety." It takes a man who is tied down to just ONE woman to do that.

Today's Text: "Thou wilt show me the path of life. In Thy presence is fullness of joy."—Psalm 16:11. Suggested by the Rev. J. West, Methodist Church, Webster.

Europe Comes Begging

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

Uncle Sam was a great guy when he had it. Yes, sir—none better, as any main-stem European nation will tell you. When it came to a quick, rough touch that old party was a prince: no huddling and haggling, no eye-gouging; just reaching down in the kick and shoveling out a bale of upper-case notes. "Uncle, it was wonderful," as Father Divine's angels would say.

Edwin C. Hill

Now, with another big European party getting started, we aren't quite in the mood. Make ours a cigar and we'll go on home to bed. We've learned a lot about addition and subtraction—particularly subtraction—in the last few years.

Within the last two months there have been four well-known international financiers back from Europe with reassuring news of what is going on over there. Europe is rebuilding; you can't believe everything you see in the papers; we shouldn't be so insular; there isn't going to be any war; European rulers are all really nice people; let's not be so offish. That's their main drift.

One of these financiers was quite specific in suggesting that England might need a nice fat loan to bring through her already remarkable gains in recovery.

LOAN NEED HINTED

He also made what seems a rather naive reference to the fact that England would need such a loan to pay for her new shooting equipment. In various European countries, there are low, non-committal murmurs about paying their debts to the United States. One might translate and interpolate:

"Listen, Joe; I'm awfully glad I bumped into you. I've been looking for you to tell you I'll have that ten-case note for you next week. Things didn't break right on that deal I told you about, but I've got a humdinger coming up, I think in a day or two.

"And it just happens that today I'm in a little jam. If you've got a few loose smackers down in the pocket . . ."

"Gone With the Wind" would have served quite as nicely as a title for Uncle Sam's foreign fiscal fling as it does for a novel. We lent Europe close to $10,000,000,000 in the war and post-war years. They were going to take it all out of Germany's hide—paying us when they got it from Germany. Germany's reparations payments were fixed at $60,000,000,000 in gold. Personally, I confess bewilderment, recalling all those giant intellects at Versailles overlooking the fact that there wasn't anywhere near that much gold in the world.

From Italy comes a seasoned, adroit, polished negotiator. He talks about Italy paying her debts. He says nothing definite or binding, but there is suggested an attitude of fairness and sportsmanship. And, of course, attention to this detail, perhaps an oversight, is preliminary to discussions of the possibility of Uncle Sam's participating in certain credit stabilization in Italy.

For decades, three or four, at least, Italy has had an adverse trade balance in her dealings with the United States, as has France for the last 20 years. The Versailles statesmen seemed to think that some kind of an international fiat could validate money and enforce debt payments, but the simple schoolbook fact is that trade balances are redressed by goods, and not by money. Italy, taking the record of the years, hasn't got what it takes.

RESTRAINT NECESSARY

The borrowing outreach of Italy, to convert her Ethiopian adventure, is more or less minor and merely illustrative, in the great world power and finance equations of today. What looms up like a steam shovel in a front yard is the fact that reforming world alignments — reforming rapidly as France devalues the franc—are going to be determined in a line-up of credit and raw materials, and not by opposed and clamorous governmental philosophies.

As always, philosophy comes after the fact, and in this case the primary fact is that Uncle Sam has more credit and raw materials to hand out than any country in the world. That is crucially important at this moment when it appears that with the French devaluation and new international monetary agreements forming, the world is looking this way again. With our $11,000,000,000 in gold, we have two-fifths of the monetary gold supply of the world, and that means that we have the greatest reservoir of credit in all history.

No sensible person will argue that credit should not be used to restore again the flux of fabricated goods and raw materials around the world. That means health and solvency and protection against extremist political insanities.

But any sensible person will insist that such power and responsibility impose new watchfulness and new restraint on finance and statecraft.

There's no reason why a gunman should step up to the counter and rig himself out with a new arsenal on tick. There's no reason why elegant moochers and deadbeats should fool us again. And there's no reason why ace-in-the-hole foreign finance should pull us into another ace-in-the-hole war.

That's That

By Bruce Gustin

Governor Landon urges American voters to "get out a pencil and check recently issued New Deal figures." Al Smith advises every citizen to get busy and "separate political bunk from the facts" in this campaign. Those are sound suggestions. Voters who do their own checking and who separate the bunk from the facts will be surprised at some of the results.

One of the favorite arguments of the New Dealers runs something like this: "Just look at what President Roosevelt has done FOR the farmers. Before he was elected wheat was 25 cents a bushel. Just look where it is now." That appears to be a formidable argument. BUT THE FIRST THING ANY FARMER WHO DOES HIS OWN CHECKING WILL DISCOVER IS THAT WHEAT PRICES SKYROCKETED BEFORE THE NEW DEAL ADMINISTRATION STARTED ANY OF ITS CROP CONTROL EXPERIMENTATION.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act was approved May 12, 1933. Announcement that wheat acreage would be cut 15 per cent came on July 31, 1933. Look up the newspaper files and you will find that on May 11, 1933, grain prices shot upward on reports of A SHORT WHEAT CROP. The government crop report indicated the smallest harvest of United States winter wheat in 29 years. December wheat sold on the Chicago market at 78 cents a bushel. By July 15, 1933, December wheat was up to $1.18 and brokers were taking about $1.25 wheat.

The natural law of supply and demand which knocked wheat prices down to ruinously low levels during the Hoover Administration produced dollar-wheat under the Roosevelt Administration. And THAT PRICE ADVANCE WOULD HAVE COME NO MATTER WHO WAS PRESIDENT.

Governor Landon has pointed out that while the Roosevelt Administration is trying to make the farmers believe it is entitled to all the credit for higher grain prices, the New Deal program actually is operating now to beat down prices and give to foreigners money which should go into the pockets of American farmers. He says that on August 19 last, corn futures reached a nine-year peak with December corn quoted at $1.02⅝. Word that 20,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn were en route or contracted for shipment to the United States caused a 10-cent drop in the market in nine days. Governor Landon charges that "President Roosevelt, through his own agricultural program, has sent 20,000,000 dollars of American money to Argentina and the American farmers have lost far more by the transaction."

Last week, press dispatches announced that 40 vessels carrying approximately 10,000,000 bushels of Argentine corn, were en route to Montreal, Canada. At the same time it was stated that a great part of the corn arriving in Montreal is destined to be transferred to the United States. Importing foreign corn which American farmers could and would raise if they were allowed to run their own business is just the same as importing foreign labor.

Dr. Robert S. Millikan, addressing a group of lawyers in Los Angeles, stated that Germany, Italy and Russia "have gone back to pure despotism, dominated by experts at the art of mass emotion," and declared that "we have the most reactionary government this country has ever known."

There are two reasons why every American citizen should give the deepest consideration to the views expressed by Dr. Millikan. First, he is NOT a politician. He has no political axe to grind. He is as impartial and unprejudiced an observer as can be found. Second, he is one of the brainiest men of this generation.
